Throne Speech Passes

Times News Services

OTTAWA (CP) — The minority Liberal government came through its third confidence test in less than a week Wednesday as the Commons approved a motion to accept the speech from the throne.

The motion, concluding an eight-day debate on the throne speech, read when Parliament opened Jan. 4, was opposed only by Conservatives.

Standings in the 264-seat House are Liberal 109, Conservative 107, NDP 31, Social Credit 15 and Independent two.

The vote was taken in a half-filled Commons with only one party leader present — Opposition Leader Stanfield. Prime Minister Trudeau was absent because of the death of his mother Tuesday in Montreal and both NDP Leader David Lewis and Social Credit Leader Real Caouette were occupied by outside meetings.

The House begins work today on supplementary spending estimates which the government must have passed to carry on federal business.

This shifts the government into another grey area where NDP support is not guaranteed except on straightforward confidence motions.

The major item of Commons business Wednesday was introduction of a bill by Manpower Minister Robert Andras that would cut off employment insurance benefits to people who quit jobs "without just cause" or who are fired for misconduct.

It would also deny benefits to unemployed persons who refuse other work "without good cause."

Andras said the legislation, if approved by the House, will save the country more than $100 million annually and end the major source of unemployment insurance abuse.

TAXING TEST for citizens is the income tax form, 11 feet long when glued edge-to-edge as it was held by Conservative MP Sinclair Stevens while he talked to reporters Wednesday. Stevens and Tory House Leader Gerald Baldwin criticized the new federal form as too long, too complicated and made of too heavy paper, making it "impossible" to make carbon copies.

Ottawa to Close POs If Strikes Continue

Times News Services

Striking postal workers blocked mail in Toronto for a second day today and a government source said Ottawa planned to shut down all post offices in the affected areas if the walkouts continued.

This would result in the total interruption of postal services if the walkouts, which occurred in Toronto, Vancouver and Belleville earlier this week, spread to other localities.

A post office spokesman said virtually no mail was being delivered in Toronto, heart of two million people, and the only intra-Metro movement was between Scarborough borough in the east and a portion of the western outskirts.

Information officer Ed Roworth, the spokesman said that to avoid adding to a pile of more than one million items here, Toronto-bound mail from elsewhere in Canada was being held at post offices en route.

Even if the strike had ended, it would have taken all day to clear up the backlog of one million pieces of mail from Wednesday's walkout.

Because of this, letter carriers had been told by the post office not to report for work until the backlog had been cleared. Bob McGarry, president of District Five of the Letter Carriers Union called the order a lockout and said the post office was "irresponsible."

Points knocked out of operation included the airmail terminal at Toronto International Airport.

Postal workers at Vancouver, however, returned to work Wednesday night after a 24-hour walkout to protest the lack of progress in negotiations.

Ottawa officials said the government is not prepared to put up with the disastrous rotating strikes which took place in 1970. The mails were thoroughly disrupted over a three-month period, yet the average postal worker lost only five days pay through the hit-and-run tactics.

This time, the government has vowed that if one office is struck by the union members, all offices depending on the first one will be shut down. And all workers will suffer financially.

The government is hoping that the public will blame the postal employees for the mail services interruption, because the employees walked out first, following the breakdown in contract negotiations Tuesday.

DOCKERS TO VOTE

VANCOUVER (CP) — A caucus of 60 International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union officials Wednesday voted a strong recommendation for acceptance by B.C. dockworkers of a proposed settlement to end a contract dispute dating back to last summer.

About 3,200 members of the union on the B.C. coast now are to vote this weekend on the settlement with the B.C. Maritime Employers Association.

NEWS BRIEFS

Drought in India

NEW DELHI (AP) — India has been hit by its worst drought in a decade and has contracted to import about two million tons of food grains — from Canada, the United States and Argentina, Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's government said Wednesday.

$2B Forecast

HALIFAX (CP) — Premier Gerald Regan Wednesday forecast investment in the Strait of Canso area within the next 10 years would be about $2 billion, more than in many Canadian provinces during that period.

New Detector

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A computerized metal detector so sensitive it can spot concealed weapons, but ignore such items as keys and cigarette lighters, has been installed at eight major U.S. airports, it was announced Wednesday.

Leary Returns

LONDON (AP) — Dr. Timothy Leary, former Harvard University lecturer and drug advocate, flew to Los Angeles today with a two-man escort from the United States narcotics bureau. Leary escaped in September, 1970, from prison in San Luis Obispo County, Calif., where he was serving a one-to-10-year sentence on a drug conviction. He was expelled from Afghanistan Wednesday.

CLC Union Unhappy

VANCOUVER (CP) — Employees of the Canadian Labor Congress have voted 87 per cent in favor of strike action. The 32 employees across Canada, members of the CLC Representatives Union, have been without a contract since June. A major item in the dispute has been pay for staff representatives.

$50,000 FOR STRAYS

It costs Victoria nearly $50,000 annually to keep stray cats and dogs off the streets, Ald. Ove Witt told city council finance committee today.

"That's a fantastic amount of money to spend on animals that are going to be buried three feet under anyway," he commented in a discussion on giving the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals a $23,000 per year two-year contract with the city.

Witt said it cost $48,628 to catch, keep and kill cats and dogs — $24,868 went on cats; $12,368 went on dogs.

"For example, 2,300 cats were brought in," Witt said. "Five hundred of them were adopted. Seventeen hundred were kept for up to three days at about $3 per day. Then it cost $5,265 to do away with them."

It was noted that the cost of dealing with unwanted pets was costing more than half the SPCA's total budget of $83,000.

The society provides two full-time pound men, keeps an office and has staffed, heated, medically-inspected kennels. It also operates a 24-hour emergency service.

Ceasefire Talks

Times News Services

A joint announcement from Hanoi and the Florida White House today said the secret Vietnam peace talks in Paris will resume Tuesday "for the purpose of completing the text of an agreement."

In Saigon, government sources said a ceasefire pact will be signed within two weeks as heavy fighting flared near the capital with both sides apparently jockeying to improve their positions in anticipation of the ceasefire.

Emphasizing that he was reading language approved by both the United States and North Vietnam, White House press secretary Ronald Ziegler said:

"Dr. Henry Kissinger will resume private negotiations with special adviser Le Duc Tho and minister Xuan Thuy on Jan. 23, 1973, for the purpose of completing the text of an agreement."

Ziegler indicated Kissinger, President Nixon's special envoy, would leave Washington Monday for Paris and said he could not predict how long the envoy might remain there.

Asked whether this would be the final meeting of Kissinger and the North Vietnamese, Ziegler said: "The announcement will have to speak for itself."

Ziegler said the United States would have no comment on the negotiations "until a final agreement is reached."

Asked whether a ceasefire might take effect in Indochina prior to completion of the promised peace agreement, Ziegler said "there has been an awful lot of speculation along that line," but added he was not prepared to "address that speculation."

Ziegler also announced that U.S. Army Gen. Alexander M. Haig Jr. now in Bangkok, Thailand, as part of a Southeast Asia tour to discuss the Paris talks, would return to Saigon Saturday and meet again with South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu. He said he did not know whether Haig would return to Washington prior to Kissinger's departure.

Escalation of battlefield fighting sparked the heaviest raids by U.S. warplanes over the south in more than two months, military spokesmen claimed today.

South Vietnamese troops encountered stiff resistance for the second consecutive day today in the Michelin Rubber Plantation, 40 miles northwest of Saigon, where a major

Impasse Over?

Labor Minister Bill King said today there is a possible basis for settlement of the 27½-month strike at Sandringham Private Hospital.

He made the comment after a 90-minute meeting with officials of the hospital and the striking Canadian Union of Public Employees.

He expcted to be in contact with both sides within a week. He admitted there is a stumbling block to settlement, but wouldn't identify it.

"I don't want to say anything or to start identifying any responsibility for the impasse which would contribute nothing to a settlement," he said.

Lawyer Neil Cook, who accompanied hospital co-owner Russell Shepherd, said "we have reached agreement as to a method of establishing whether we can resolve the issue." He said he would be in touch with employees working at the hospital between now and Saturday.

'Canada First' Policy On Oil Exports Unchanged

OTTAWA (CP) — The worsening U.S. heating oil shortage has opened the door for what amounts to full-capacity exports of Western Canada supplies.

But the Canadian policy remains unchanged and remains aloof from a so-called continental policy, federal spokesmen said today.

They said Deputy Minister Jack Austin of the federal energy department was misinterpreted Wednesday in being quoted as saying that some progress has been made on sharing oil supplies in an emergency.

The spokesmen said that applies solely to the talks that have been proceeding privately and quietly for two years or more on another kind of emergency — how Eastern Canada would get its imported oil in the event of any situation threatening supplies now coming from Venezuela, the Middle East and elsewhere.

It has been the U.S. fear that if Eastern Canada oil reserves were cut off, its imports from Western Canada also would dry up as the Canadian tap was turned to Eastern Canada.

The current situation is another kind of emergency that has no bearing on existing discussions, they said.

President Nixon Wednesday announced what amounts to temporary full-capacity access for Western Canada oil east of the Rockies, with more oil also bound for the West Coast, which has not been subject to the formal quota system.

But the official Canadian position on oil-sharing remains as spelled out last week by Energy Minister Donald Macdonald, a spokesman said.

The minister told the Commons last week that an oil-sharing agreement — or continental approach — would apply only if all North America is cut off from its foreign suppliers.

PLANNED MURDER UP DURING HANGING BAN

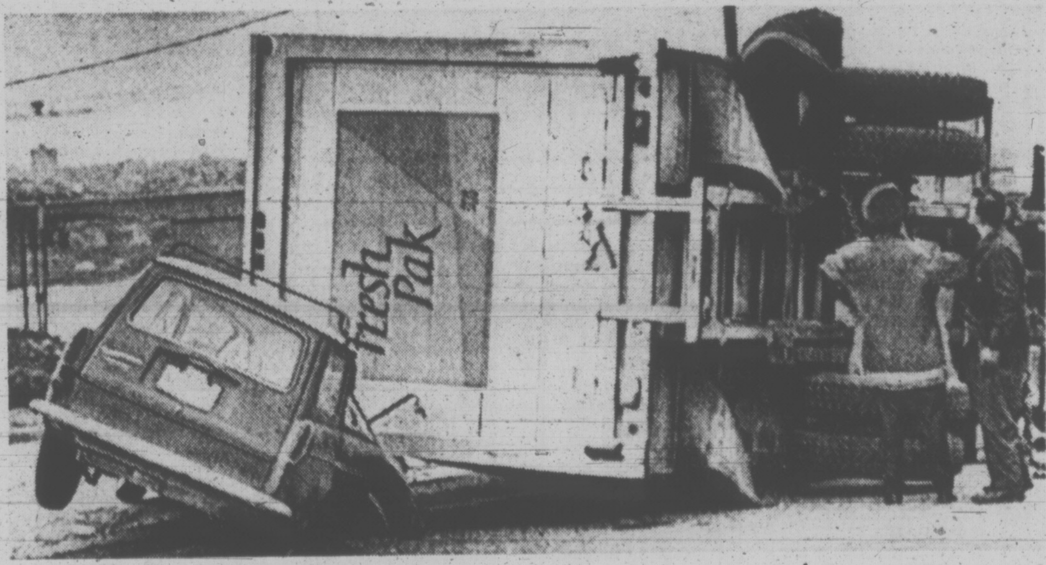
CALGARY (CP) — The Herald says unpublished figures prepared by the federal government show the number of murders involving premeditation or committed in the course of other crimes increased sharply during the ban on capital punishment.

Statistics released on murders have only given the bare totals, the paper said, but the judicial section of Statistics Canada has broken these down according to motive, as determined by police.

Murder for revenge during the first three years of the capital punishment ban, 1968-70, increased to 76 from 57 in the three years before the ban.

During the same time, murders in the course of robbery and theft almost doubled to 119 from 61 and those committed during sexual assault rose to 44 from 28.

Murders in the course of other criminal acts rose to 61 from 11, but the paper said this category is misleading because 40 of those deaths were attributed to an arson fire in Quebec.



INCHES FROM DEATH, but the driver of the little station wagon was not seriously injured when the large truck overturned onto his car at a Vancouver intersection. Rush-hour traffic was tied up for several hours as wreckers struggled to right the overturned truck.

Only the Insane Know Who's Sane?

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Who's sane? Who's insane?

The psychiatrists and staffs of mental hospitals cannot be trusted to tell the difference, says Prof. David L. Rosenhan, a Stanford University psychologist.

Rosenhan says he and seven other sane investigators arranged as a test to be admitted as schizophrenic patients in 12 different mental hospitals, yet none of the eight was found to be sane by hospital professionals.

But Rosenhan says it was "quite common" for actual psychiatric patients to identify correctly the "pseudo-patient" imposters.

Rosenhan said he and his seven colleagues eventually were released as "schizophrenics in remission," despite their best efforts to convince the hospital staff of their sanity.

"We now know that we cannot distinguish insanity from sanity," Rosenhan said.

"We continue to label patients 'schizophrenic,' 'manic-depressive,' and 'insane' as if in those words we had captured the essence of understanding," he wrote.

"The facts of the matter are that we have known for a long time that our diagnoses often are not useful or reliable, but we have nevertheless continued to use them."

Rosenhan seid he and the other pseudo-patients were shocked and horrified by their experiences.

But, he said, they did not blame the hospital staffs.

"By and large, they were well-intentioned people, and in no way do we want to malign them," he said.

Rosenhan said the pseudo-patient group included a psychiatrist, a pediatrician, a painter, a housewife, a Stanford psychology graduate student and three other psychologists.

He said they gained admission to hospitals in California, Oregon, Pennsylvania, New York and Delaware by feigning symptoms of schizophrenia.

"The uniform failure to recognize sanity cannot be attributed to the quality of treatment facilities," Rosenhan said. "While there was considerable variability between them, several are considered excellent.

"Nor can it be alleged that there simply was not enough time to observe the pseudo-patients. Length of hospitalization ranged from seven to 52 days, with an average of 19 days."

CORONA GUILTY IN DEATHS

FAIRFIELD, Calif. (AP) — A jury found Juan Corona guilty today of the biggest mass murder in United States history, the slaying of 25 transient laborers whose bodies were found in shallow graves near Yuba City in 1971.

The jury of 10 men and two women found Corona guilty after more than 46 hours of deliberations which stretched over eight days.

Wild Dog Packs Threaten Ontario Villagers

MOOSONEE, Ont. (CP) — More and more people in this James Bay community are carrying sticks when they walk the streets.

Fresh in their minds is the case of Jane Marks who was attacked by a pack of dogs Dec. 23 and still is in hospital recovering from more than 200 stitches needed to close wounds in her arms, legs and face.

The stick acts like a jack-nife or slingshot in your pocket while walking down a lonely wooded path. There is a sense of security.

But the danger that lurks here is real.

Mrs. Marks was hauled down by a pack of dogs which police say have no real owners. They run loose—leftovers from the days when people used dogs to haul supplies.

The day of the dogsled has practically vanished. The snowmobile now is the vehicle of winter transportation.

"Mrs. Marks is quite well now," said Dr. N. L. Fraser. "We don't get this type of thing often but one is enough to scare anybody."

The five-man provincial police detachment here is forced to shoot stray dogs with shotguns.

"Hell, we're just like anyone else," said a police spokesman. "We don't like shooting dogs but we have to—for the public's sake."

A salesman from Kirkland Lake said he drove past the community's dump and saw a pack of about eight.

"There was just no way I was going to get out of that car," he said. "They looked bad."

Many of the bitches in this community and up the western James Bay coast have their litters in the bush and the young are half wild.

"It's just like they were part wolf," said a police spokesman.

Five-Car Collision

An estimated $2,700 damage resulted from a five-car collision on an "icy" section of the Pat Bay Highway Wednesday, Central Saanich police said today.

All five drivers were unhurt, police said.

Cars driven by John Howard Nyru, 2467 Mt. St. Michael's, and John Harrison, 10082 Tsaykum, skidded near the intersection at Mt. Newton Cross Road and collided. Both cars remained on the road.

Mrs. Bernard Walsh, 4131 Borden, saw the first two cars and skidded onto a soft shoulder to avoid them. Her car was undamaged, police said.

Emilio Navarro, 10148 Resthaven, also tried to avoid the first two cars and slid into a ditch.

A car driven by Mrs. Diane McBratney, 1340 Munro, spun on the ice and crashed into the concrete median, said police.

All cars were heading toward the city in the morning rush hour.

Manslaughter Charge

Ernest Lavern Hotvedt, charged with non-capital murder Nov. 5, will face a lesser charge of manslaughter Friday, Crown Prosecutor Alan Bigelow said today.

After four days of testimony given by 25 witnesses, the all-male jury retired at 3:50 p.m. Jan. 11. It returned twice for further legal instruction from the judge and at 2:45 a.m. advised the court it was unable to reach a verdict.

In Canadian law, anyone convicted of manslaughter is liable to imprisonment for life." The "minimum punishment" for non-capital murder is life imprisonment.

the weather

A strong Pacific storm that was off the California coast on Wednesday is expected to track offshore towards the Queen Charlotte Islands. Consequently the only appreciable precipitation expected in B.C. will occur on the coast and in the cold Arctic air covering the extreme northern Interior. Meanwhile another storm winding up far out to sea is expected to affect coastal regions during the latter part of Friday.

Rape Trial Verdict: Guilty, Jury Suggests Leniency

George Jerome Makow was convicted of rape by a B.C. Supreme Court jury here Wednesday.

After five hours of deliberation the jury returned its verdict with a recommendation for leniency.

He was charged by Colwood RCMP following an incident in the Highlands district Nov. 17 involving a 23-year-old Saanich woman.

The complainant, a registered nurse, testified during the three-day trial that Makow and a female passenger had picked her up on Douglas Street Nov. 16 while hitch-hiking home.

She told the jury of three women and nine men that the accused dropped off the other woman and drove to the wooded area where she was forced to comply with his demands.

Makow told the court he made no threats nor exercised any force. He said the woman had taken "quite an active part" in the intercourse.

In his address to the jury, defence counsel Harold Turnham said, "There is no question that intercourse took place."

The question was whether or not there was voluntary consent, said Turnham.

He told the jury that Makow did not strike the woman and had no weapons on his person.

"And yet she says she was in fear of bodily harm . . . She didn't put up any struggle at all," said Turnham.

In his summation, Prosecutor Alan Bigelow said the jury must assess the credibility of each witness and decide whose testimony to believe—that of the accused or that of the complainant.

Turnham had pointed out that the woman hitch-hiked regularly.

"There's no open season on hitch-hikers," said Bigelow, "This girl isn't on trial for hitch-hiking — this man's on trial for rape."

Turnham also mentioned the woman had admitted to being a casual user of marijuana.

"That doesn't allow this man to come along and rape her just because she's taken pot," said Bigelow.

In his charge to the jury, McIntyre said the issue was on the nature of the consent — was it voluntary or forced?

Testimony concerning the character of the witnesses was given "so that you can form some idea of who you're going to believe," said McIntyre.

"No matter what her character, if she did not consent, it's rape," he said.

The jury retired about 2 p.m. and returned shortly after 7 p.m. They returned to the courtroom once to ask for further legal instructions from McIntyre and to have some of the evidence read back by a court reporter.

LIP Grant Approved For Parks

A wide variety of improvements in the city's parks will be made under a Local Initiatives Program approved for Victoria Wednesday.

The $61,500 federal grant will put 14 people to work for six months, city council's parks committee was told today.

The money will be spent on cleaning up Smith's Hill, a new park at the Saanich boundary near Cook; replacing playground fences, fixing boulevards, reconditioning flower beds and other projects.

Part of the grant will go to pay for improvements to the Hollywood Park drainage system.

have been free to strike legally since Dec. 21, following conciliation proceedings.

Meanwhile, at Belleville, Ont., mail service returned to normal Wednesday night after letter carriers withdrew picket lines set up earlier in the day.

The picket lines were withdrawn on an understanding that an agreement would be reached in the dispute with the federal treasury board within 48 hours, or the strike would resume.

One factor in the Belleville situation is that the Unemployment Insurance Commission's central commuter is located there and officials said 24,000 pieces of mail were delayed.

The computer centre is responsible for UIC payments throughout the province. Officials said the UIC has a private delivery service to take mail to district offices in the event of a postal disruption.

Meanwhile, Postmaster-General Andre Ouellet said in the House of Commons the government is ready to accept all terms of a conciliation board report in its contract dispute with postal workers.

Faced with opposition suggestions that the government was backing away from the report and negotiations had broken down, Ouellet assured the House the government position has not changed and a contract may be signed soon.

. . . CEASEFIRE TALKS

communist buildup of 8,000 men with armor and artillery was reported. The buildup poses a major threat to the South Vietnamese capital and its outlying areas.

Military sources said 13 government soldiers were killed and 40 wounded in the fighting there Wednesday, and the battle continued today when a large communist force attacked a 1,000-man South Vietnamese field position.

U.S. warplanes, no longer in action over North Vietnam, struck heavily in the area around Saigon and also in northernmost Quang Tri province where fighting also continued in the government campaign to push North Vietnamese forces back into the demilitarized zone (DMZ) between the two Vietnams.

The Saigon sources said Thieu and his National Security Council agreed Wednesday night to the terms of the ceasefire worked out between Kissinger and Le Duc Tho.

South Vietnam believes it could have obtained more concessions in the peace agreement but was willing to sign believing it had obtained sufficient concessions to guarantee the future of the country, the sources said.

In Bangkok, U.S. Ambassador Leonard Unger told the American Chamber of Commerce that U.S. military strength in Thailand will be scaled down when the Vietnam war ends, but sufficient strength will be maintained to prevent violations of the peace agreement. There now are 49,000 U.S. troops stationed in Thailand, carrying on the air war in Vietnam.

The draft agreement calls for a withdrawal of all U.S. forces from Vietnam within 60 days of signing, but there is no prohibition against U.S. forces in Thailand or against U.S. naval forces in the area.

President Thieu has given his province chiefs wide latitude to make political arrests after the coming ceasefire and has also empowered them to "shoot troublemakers" on the spot, reliable South Vietnamese sources said Wednesday.

Wherever possible, American sources added, those arrested are to be charged with common crimes instead of political ones because, it is acknowledged, the prisoners are easier to deal with that way. The communist demand for release of all political prisoners has been a sticking point in the Paris negotiations and the government's intention, sources said, is to keep the number of prisoners down, at least on paper.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A suspended sentence and two-year probationary term were ordered by Judge William Ostler in provincial court Wednesday for a 19-year-old Victoria man on a charge of attempted breaking and entering.

Earlier, Michael Cousins, of 1955 Ashgrove, had pleaded guilty to unlawfully trying to enter Highland Woodworkers Ltd., 116 Dallas, early on Dec. 28.

In his report, the probation officer noted that Cousins was easily led by his peers.

Prosecutor J. W. Anderson, reminded the judge "he was alone at the time" and that the act was "a most deliberate one."

Asked by Ostler if he had been talked into the incident, Cousins replied:

"Well, I was broke and they offered me a hundred bucks."

Noting that the probation officer had recommended a suspended sentence, Ostler reminded Cousins that this was the second time he had committed an offence and been put on probation.

"This, as far as I am concerned," he said, "is the last time you'll get away with this sort of thing."

Intensive Care Unit Authorized

The provincial government has authorized a start on a nine-bed intensive care unit for Victoria General Hospital.

The current four-bed unit, for care of the critically ill, has been so crowded in recent months doctors have on occasion got in squabbles over whose patient was more ill and deserved care there.

Authorization from the B.C. Hospital Insurance Service to start on working drawings for the expanded unit came Wednesday, John Murray, the hospital's acting executive director said today.

It will cost $112,587 to more than double and equip the third-floor unit and work will take about three months once the working drawings are approved.

A hospital's ICU, with its sophisticated telemetry for monitoring a patient's condition, is where severely injured accident victims and critical drug overdose cases, among others, are taken.

BCHIS also authorized a start on renovations to the neo-natal unit at Victoria General, where babies are cared for during their first 48 hours.

The Women's Auxiliary at the hospital is supplying $27,000 towards equipping that unit. The work is expected to take about six weeks once working drawings are approved.

MENUHIN SHINES FOR VICTORIANS

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

At the top of his form, the great, teh legendary Menuhin can only add lustre to the crown he already wears as one of the 20th century immortals.

Fifteen hundred people acknowledged it when they rose as one at conclusion of Beethoven's mammoth D major Violin Concerto, shouting and pounding out their enthusiasm.

Laszlo Gati and the Victoria Symphony Orchestra acknowledged it, paying their tribute with a particularly sensitive and attentive, if now and then slightly flawed accompaniment.

For most people Menuhin was a magical figure from the moment he came on stage to stand, swaying very slightly, eyes closed as the orchestra played the introduction to Mozart's A major concerto.

Then came the first solo phrase, silkily smooth, expressive, finely shaped.

No doubt there were many of us in the audience who heard Menuhin on previous occasions. But we were roused to marvel all over again at the total mastery of the performer whose instrument seems as much an integral part of himself as the singer's voice or the dancer's body.

It is idle to comment on a technique that is and has been, for many years, incomparable.

The splendors of the Beethoven flashed and shimmered through every elaboration and virtuosic complexity; roccoco elegance and ornamentation has never been more perfectly expressed than in the Mozart.

But apart from these considerations, one is aware of a superb musical intellect, a depth of spirituality and a warmth that explore and express every detail and aspect of the work being performed.

Menuhin responded to his overwhelming reception with a rare encore, playing unaccompanied Bach with electrifying virtuosity and baroque style.

The Beethoven Symphony No. 1 with which the program opens was not a toe-tip performance by the orchestra. There was a feeling of insecurity and flacidity to begin with but this evaporated as the performance proceeded and Gati coaxed forth much more of the customary vitality in the concluding two movements.

Saanich Council May Avoid Ice Surface Referendum

The new chairman of Saanich council's indoor recreation committee has had second thoughts about pressing a public referendum to ask support for a new municipal ice surface.

He sees merit in private or jointly-owned alternatives.

Last year Ald. Fred Severson, suggested that a proposed second ice surface be put to the ratepayers.

Ald. Leslie Passmore's indoor recreation committee gave unanimous support to placing a borrowing bylaw at the earliest opportunity, which subsequently passed council by a 5-4 vote. Some preliminary investigation was started by members of council and municipal staff, but no priority was assigned to it or to preparation of a bylaw.

Meanwhile, alternative ideas such as a privately-owned arena were drawn into discussion on an informal basis.

Today Severson said he sees great possibilities in a privately-operated arena, one of which would be to eliminate the need of holding a referendum for a publicly-owned facility.

Another proposal, in which an ice surface owned jointly by the core municipalities of Greater Victoria might be constructed, would save tax money and provide facilities needed by Saanich, Victoria and Oak Bay.

"Basically, I feel there should be no boundaries when it comes to recreation," Severson said. "If we can get the three or four core municipalties involved, it will save money for the taxpayer."

It might also avoid a referendum since the Saanich share could be within municipal borrowing powers without ratepayer consent.

Severson was one of a group of aldermen and officials who toured the privately-owned Columbian 4-Rinks Ltd. arena in Burnaby late in the fall. By putting four rinks under one roof the private firm hopes to cater to ice requirements of the entire lower mainland on a 12-month basis.

Columbian has said it is interested in the capital region, although on a smaller scale than in Burnaby, and has had informal discussion with Saanich. The firm has made no formal proposal and spokesmen indicated they are awaiting some indication of a site being available before proceeding.

Severson said he was "a little worried about a referendum" and its ramifications — namely the tax load on ratepayers — and the extra cost to Saanich at a time when no provision has been made for recreation capital outlays.

"I wouldn't like to see something go to a referendum and be defeated. I'm weighing this right now," Severson said.

"I want a rink in the worst way, but the cheapest way," he added.

Severson hoped to consult Mayor Hugh Curtis within a few days, study the situation further before resuming committee-level discussion, and possibly sit down with other Saanich representatives and city of Victoria spokesmen in exploring a joint undertaking.

He said there is wisdom in coming to some kind of understanding before budget time in April.

Ald. Alan Newberry, one of those who supported an early referendum, said he is still as eager to see an ice surface with the least loss of time and urged, "let's get on with it."

He cited the mayor's inaugural speech, which suggested proceeding with caution on a referendum, but which also stated that "a majority of council will prevail, and that's on the record."

There is need, priority and council commitment to take the matter to the people, Newberry said.

But there is also the question of a one-third grant offered by the provincial government, details of which are vague.

That, together with the Columbian possibility, must be considered with an overall view of recreational development within Saanich, Newberry said, suggesting another five or 10-year capital development program such as the one just ending in the municipality.

Tories 'Missed Chance'

Members who quit Oak Bay Conservative Association since the provincial election passed up a chance to have their grievances aired Wednesday.

Newly-elected first vice-president Norman Pimlott said today: "They would have had an opportunity to speak out. They didn't."

He said three resigned and were at the meeting, but he declined to identify them other than to say one had been an interim member of the executive. One had left the association immediately after the election for personal reasons not connected with the other two.

"They've all worked hard for the party and we would hate to lose them. We're hoping that whatever dissension there was will dissipate, and we will try to build better communications within the association."

Campbell R. Hospital Bid Down

Farmer Construction Ltd. of Victoria has submitted a revised bid of $1,956,302 on scaled-down plans for expansion of Campbell River Hospital.

The company was the low bidder on the original tender call for the project last fall. The firm was asked to submit a new tender after Health Minister Dennis Cocke called a public inquiry to investigate possible irregularities in the competition.

The inquiry was told Farmer Construction's original low bid of $2,221,700 was about $600,000 more than the budget figure of $1.6 million.

British Columbia Hospital Insurance officials said new scaled-down plans tendered by Farmer Construction were viable and would be considered.

The tenders now will be referred to Cocke by the hospital's board of trustees.

$110,000 Aim Of Cancer Drive

A $110,000 target has been set for the Greater Victoria Unit of the Canadian Cancer Society's campaign, which gets under way on the weekend.

As in the past five years, campaign chairman is W. Stanley Moore. Campaign activity will climax in April when a full residential drive will be held throughout the Greater Victoria area.

This year's provincial target is $800,000.

Booming Goodwill Turns 15

Today is the 15th anniversary of Goodwill Enterprises' first opening of its Yates Street store.

The newly-formed organization then had a payroll of 10.

There are now more than 150 on staff, more than 130 of them handicapped. This figure does not include about 20 handicapped persons under training or assessment.

Alec Reid, community relations officer for Goodwill, recalls how Goodwill grew out of a small group, the League of the Handicapped, headed by Fred Blakeney, himself confined to a wheelchair.

Emanating from that group, Goodwill Enterprises for the Handicapped was registered as a non-profit charitable organization in late 1957. Assisted by the Rotary Club of Victoria, the store and original workshop was opened at 560 Yates.

From that modest start Goodwill has grown steadily and increased its facilities. Branch stores have also been opened in Duncan, Nanaimo and Courtenay.

The annual payroll is now more than $500,000 and extra on-the-job training is carried out at Goodwill's Bay Street premises.

The Yates Street store, however, still is the main outlet for items which come from the main workshops. Practically all the money raised comes from store sales, Goodwill being dependent on the supply of repairable articles donated by the public. These include clothing, furniture, electrical appliances and numerous household items.

Taxmen Eye Public Purse

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal and provincial finance ministers started their annual assault on taxpayers' wallets today with John Turner promising he will bear in mind that "no matter who spends it, the money comes from one source."

As federal finance minister, Turner is the key Ottawa man at the closed, two-day meeting that will set the guides for federal and provincial tax moves for the immediate future.

Speaking brieflly to reporters before he entered the conference room Turner said he expects the provinces to push hard for more revenues.

Ontario didn't disappoint him. It immediately urged a cut of $1 billion in personal income taxes to spur the economy and allow more tax room for the provinces.

John White, the new Ontario treasurer, made the proposal at the opening session of the conference, and suggested continuation of a temporary three-per-cent income tax cut now in effect and granting an additional six-per-cent cut.

He suggested that five per cent of the overall reduction be used for direct taxpayer relief and the other four per cent be replaced by compensating income tax increases at the provincial level.

In the past, Prime Minister Trudeau has turned down provincial requests for more money, either in direct grants or by having Ottawa reduce its tax levies in some fields to allow the provinces to extend theirs.

He suggested those provinces seeking more money should raise their taxes and accept the responsibility — a probable lessening of popularity with voters.

SITUATION CHANGED

Now that voters have shown decreased affection for the federal Liberals, and with early prospects of another election running high, the provinces expect the central government to be more receptive to their demands.

Quebec already has warned that unless it is able to get more revenue the province will have to turn to higher borrowings abroad. This would put upward pressure on the Canadian dollar, making it more difficult for Canada to compete in export markets.

Manitoba Premier Ed Schreyer said his government would support a national plan for an immediate freezing of retail food prices, provided it were accompanied by measures to strengthen the income position of primary producers.

Schreyer told the meeting such controls would be an "extreme step" and could have only limited duration.

"Nevertheless they would provide a temporary, partial solution to the problem while federal and provincial government formulated long-term pllans, for dealing with the food price situation."

Time to Face the Facts

The postal system of this country, frequently under fire in recent years for deteriorating service, appears once more to be threatened with a nation-wide strike. Already local walkouts have taken place in Toronto and Vancouver and may erupt elsewhere. The postal workers show an increasing willingness — indeed, an eagerness — to halt work with little provocation when negotiations are under way.

As yet there is no crunching stalemate in the negotiations to warrant the final extremity of halting the country's mail delivery in any locality. But the annoyance and cost of dislocating an essential communication system across Canada are threatened, and sometimes inflicted, if the demands of the postmen are not met.

One cannot blame postmen for wanting to get the highest return for their labor that they can show is reasonable. But that is a different thing from holding a nation to ransom for a return that is more than a job is worth. The education required, the skill and the length of training are elements in the wage equation, and jobs of relatively low requirements cannot command returns approaching skilled trades. On the other hand, the postal workers are an essential link in the chain of communication across the nation, and they increasingly use this key postition to exert leverage in negotiations. The current controversy concerns the relatively minor matter of one aspect of grievance procedure.

Misuse of this power can lead only to one result, as the country and its government try to protect themselves against a demonstration of labor strength. That result will be an effort to minimize the threat, and this can include legislation to prohibit strikes in nationally essential occupations, and an increasing resort to automatic equipment to replace human labor wherever possible.

Higher echelons of organized labor are beginning to realise that the strike weapon is becoming outmoded in this age, that the use of a heavy club on every occasion is becoming poor public relations and less productive of results. The more critical the job involved and the worse the inconvenience that is caused by a strike, the more quickly society will move to erect safeguards against the trouble.

Workers engaged in public security, health, education and essential services such as communications, water supply and other necessary facilities, should be striving for a recognition of their special status in the social organization, and for a better system of ascertaining the value of their labor, than continuing to resort to the heavy-handed threat of strike which spurs counter-efforts to curb their powers.

Distorted by Violence

While the killing of men, women and children causes the greatest anguish in Ireland's current shameful story, humans apparently are not to be the only casualties. Deeply imbedded principles of British justice are to be set aside in Northern Ireland as the result of prevailing conditions.

One is the right to jury trial in serious criminal cases. Another is the withdrawal of the presumption of innocence extended to an accused until guilt is proven.

These changes are viewed as turning points in British legal history, though the presumption of innocence is not universally applicable under systems following the British model.

Jury trial is to be suspended because jury members can be, and have been, threatened and because witnesses may be, and in some cases have been, murdered after giving evidence. Judges are expected to be less susceptible to such threats — and probably more easily protected against them — than a group of ordinary citizens chosen to sit in judgment.

Denial of the presumption of innocence will occur in cases in which suspects are found in possession of arms or explosives. In Canadian law a similar attitude toward possession is adopted in narcotics cases.

The decision to place the onus of proof on the defendant follows experiences in which individuals have been taken into custody in possession of guns and bombs and have successfully challenged the authorities to prove that such possession was not innocent—that the arrested persons involved hadn't just found the arms and explosives in the street.

To a nation which has cherished and defended the freedom of the individual down through the centuries, the amendments to legal process in Northern Ireland come with troubling effects. High principles are being violated. Yet the response to any criticism of the action is already evident.

As the Manchester Guardian phrases it, the obligation on critics "is to consider the alternative form of justice currently being dispensed by both Protestant and Catholic extremists in Ulster night after night — a shot in the head, without benefit of trial."

'Beautiful'

Astronaut Stuart Roosa deserves a gold star on his report card for English appreciation. He's tired, he says, of hearing his fellow astronauts describe the view in outer space as "beautiful" — the sole adjective they use. A poet or a writer should be included in the crews, he believes, to do the sight justice.

Beauty, we're told, lies in the eye of the beholder, but it doesn't tell us much if the beholder is inarticulate. What kind of "beautiful" is being described? The smooth operation of a well-tuned engine — which is beautiful to a mechanic? The appearance of a Miss World candidate — on whom judgment can be pretty subjective? Ma's apple pie — which reflects different tastes? The splendor of a sunrise or sunset, the majesty of a towering, snow-capped peak, or whatever?

Beautiful suggestion you've made, Mr. Astronaut.

ART STOTT

Architect of Sustained-Yield

World War II had just drawn to a close when the late Gordon Sloan, then Chief Justice of British Columbia, presented his first report as commissioner investigating the forest resources of British Columbia. His inquiry had been launched in response to the dismayed recognition in all forestry quarters that the great timberlands of this province were not inexhaustible as the source of raw material for the industry on which British Columbia depended for half its production dollar.

H. R. MacMillan, former government chief forester who left the public service to create the industrial empire that carried his name, defined the emergency in a homely metaphor: British Columbia was entering the front door of timber harvest and the back door was already in sight.

From the exhaustive commission inquiries, research and painstaking study emerged the prescription for a remedy. British Columbia, said the commissioner, would have to place its forests on a sustained-yield basis. That meant that cutting would have to be controlled and a new replacement crop guaranteed, either through natural regeneration or planting. Big timber concerns, with forests of their own, could acquire licenses to cut crown timber under regulation usually on their agreement to bring their own lands under government-supervised sustained yield policy.

Into Actuality

The problem had been defined, the solution proposed. All that remained was conversion of the proposal into actuality. By exaggerated modern analogy: There's the moon. We're going to put men on it. Figure out how.

The task was placed in the hands of Dr. Chauncey Donald Orchard, whom everybody called "Dick"—then chief forester for B.C. — whose death this week removed the man who changed theory into practice. How well he succeeded is spelled out in Gordon Sloan's 1956 report following his second inquiry.

"Dr. Orchard merits special reference in these closing remarks," wrote the commissioner. "He may be truly regarded as the chief architect of our present policy of sustained-yield forest management. It was his insistence that such a policy be inaugurated that led to the 1944-45 Commission, and it was largely upon his shoulders that the onerous responsibility rested of translating the broad outlines of my 1945 recommendations into detailed legislation acceptable to the government. Since the forest-management policy was written into the 'Forest Act' he has been, as Chief Forester, charged with its administration. While it is true that the machinery he has created in such a relatively short time is rough-cast in spots and not free from defects — as he himself has freely admitted — nevertheless it meets the pragmatic test: it works.

C. D. ORCHARD
. . . he made it work

"Streamlining will come later from knowledge gained by experience. In the meantime the foundations have been well laid, and Dr. Orchard's influential part therein has deservedly earned for him a special place in the historical development of our forest resources."

That recognizes part of Dick Orchard's record of service. A multitude of anecdotes could outline more. When the Liberal government sought to help to rehabilitate young offenders, it decided to send selected jail inmates due for early release into forestry camps, believing the outdoors, the healthy life and normal associates would aid them on their way back into acceptable citizenship. Dick Orchard figured out how it could be done.

Human Rehabilitation

That activity brought him into rehabilitation work on a voluntary basis. Tribute to his effectiveness over a long period as a member was paid to him by the John Howard Society of Vancouver Island a year or two ago.

A newapaperman no longer young remembers the infinite patience of the man helping a green reporter to understand not only some of the intricacies of the forest service work and industry, but to recognize problems from both sides. The villains, in Dick Orchard's painting, were not so black, the heroes not so white. His compassion did not blur faults, but it made allowances for human error and it dispelled harsh judgments based on lack of understanding.

Under receding grey hair that turned white, a high forehead rose above eyes that often blinked owlishly behind horned rimmed glasses. From his mouth issued words, spoken slowly, a little gravelly, that said something.

". . . phew! . . . let's keep the Bapco paint plant . . ."

JAMES RESTON

To Go or Not to Go

NEW YORK — The new Nixon Cabinet is up before the Senate these days for confirmation, and more often than not, it is a painful sight. For the new boys, reaching for the most prestigious jobs of their lives, face the most searching question about what they really believe, and somehow they have to try to be faithful to themselves and to the President who has nominated them, and to his policies, which they may or may not approve.

Elliot L. Richardson of Massachusetts, former Secretary of HEW, former law clerk to Learned Hand and Felix Frankfurter, and now Nixon's appointee as Secretary of Defence, illustrates the problem. The senators surveyed him with skeptical courtesy.

What did he think of the Christmas bombing of Hanoi? In that room were senators on the bench and students and colleagues from Harvard who knew him back in the days when he could and did say what he thought privately about power and pity, but now he had a decision to make between his political ambition, his private philosophy, and his responsibility to the President who had nominated him.

At first he stammered, until Sen. Hughes of Iowa inquired whether he was going to answer the hard questions straight, and he said maybe he wasn't, and later decided to support the bombing, risking the fire of the Congress rather than the ire of the White House.

He will be confirmed by the Senate — no doubt about that in the long run. He is an intelligent and experienced public servant, and the senators know from their own experience, that life is a very complicated process between private conviction and public policy. But, the problem still remains.

Conflict

At what point do private conviction and public policy break? Under Secretary of State George Ball disagreed with Lyndon Johnson's Vietnam policy as much as Anthony Eden disagreed with Neville Chamberlain's appeasement policy in Britain before the last world war, but Eden resigned on principle, and Ball stayed on in the belief that he could be more faithful to his principles arguing with the President inside the government than scalding him in the newspapers and magazines outside the government.

Henry Kissinger has an even tougher problem than either Ball or Richardson. Like them, he has been around for a long time. He is an historian and a teacher. His views on power, diplomacy, and politics are well known to his large company of friends in the press and in the university and political communities, and it would be hard to convince any of them who have known him over the last two decades that he approves the recent bombing of North Vietnam.

Yet he stays on in Paris and tries to do the best he can, and is vilified in the process by many of his best friends for doing so. Would it be better if he got out and slammed the door? And left the President to deal with the consequences of his resignation, which would reassure Hanoi? And turned the President over to the advice of John Connally, John Mitchell, and Bill Rogers in the last critical phase of the Vietnam negotiations?

ELLIOT RICHARDSON
. . . decision to make

One remembers the day in the House of Commons when Eden broke with Chamberlain, and Duff Cooper resigned on the same fundamental principle that he couldn't serve a policy he opposed. And yet one wonders whether Kissinger and Richardson are in the same situation.

It might be even worse if Kissinger resigned on the bombing, and Richardson said he was against the bombing but wanted to be Secretary of Defence anyway. The bet here is that the public would support the President and that Kissinger and Richardson would be replaced by men who would make a ceasefire in Vietnam even more difficult than it is now.

Even so, we are left with a highly unsatisfactory situation. The Senate has a constitutional responsibility to confirm the President's nominee for Secretary of Defence. It wants to know what Elliot Richardson thinks, for it will probably have to deal with him for four long years, But Richardson at first hesitates, and then supports the President, and leaves the Senate to confirm him, as it will, but with serious doubts.

'Right' or Best

This is not a new problem. Always men at the top of powerful institutions have had to deal with the conflict between what they believe to be "right" and what they believe to be best for the institution. And in the end, and increasingly over the last generation, they have swallowed their own beliefs and gone along with the institution.

Robert McNamara and later Clark Clifford went along for a while and then broke with the President on Vietnam — not openly but gradually, but their opposition was not really effective in changing the policy — it was too subtle and too late.

The chances are that Kissinger eventually will break with Nixon, either if he finally manages to negotiate a compromise, or if he doesn't. But meanwhile, he knows more about the intricate issues in the ceasefire negotiations and more about the personality and psychology of Le Duc Tho than anybody else, so he is staying on during the last phase of the talks, and carrying out the President's instructions, and he is probably right.

For breaking now would probably be worse. The chances for a compromise, for reconciling the basic interests of North and South Vietnam, of the United States, China and the Soviet Union are probably better now than they are likely to be in the coming year or so in Southeast Asia.

So Kissinger is staying and negotiating, and since he has managed to create some sense of trust with Le Duc Tho, the chances are that he has a better chance of arranging a ceasefire than anybody else.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Differences

It is obvious that your correspondent "Very puzzled" knows very little about the Viet Nam war. He obviously does not realize that Viet Nam is one nation, not two, and was only artificially divided after the defeat of the French in 1954. Under the terms of the Geneva Treaty it was agreed that a U.N. supervised plebiscite would be held within two years to decide the future of the country. However the U.S., with its sponsored dictator Diem, refused to comply with this solemn agreement. So the war in Viet Nam is in fact a civil war as stated so many times by Mr. Chester Ronning who was Canadian ambassador in Indo-China for many years.

Another correspondent criticized Canadians for their attitude towards Viet Nam when they seemed to accept the situation in Northern Ireland which is part of the Commonwealth. As one whose family hails from Southern Ireland I should like to state categorically that the trouble in Northern Ireland is the work of just a handful of thugs and does not have the support of the Irish Republic. In fact the IRA is illegal in the South.

If Britain were raining bombs on the South in support of the minority in the North I would agree 100 per cent that we should condemn such action. However even Mr. Lynch, the Prime Minister of the Irish Republic, has stated categorically that the presence of British troops in the North is essential until such time as a solution has been reached.

In view of these facts I cannot see any similarity between the U.S. aggression in Viet Nam and the British action in Northern Ireland. — M. P. B. Wrixon, 1680 Poplar Ave.

Home Front

World resources are limited and now that the United States is jealously eyeing Canada's seemingly limitless supply of water and oil and the other natural resources with which she is endowed — we should guard our border with care. We should also consider on our own home front — pollution Canada style. I am referring to the logging operations by British Columbia Forest Products which due to improper practices prevent the salmon from spawning in many creeks and rivers up north. I endorse the Sierra Club and the fishermen on this very important issue. In another ten to fifteen years our environment and resources will be non-existent if we indulge in overpopulation and a lack of natural conservation.—Rosamund Lines, 132 South Turner.

60 YEARS AGO

From The Times of Jan. 18, 1913:

NEW YORK — Rioting of a fierce nature in which hundreds of women engaged and wielded hat pins with dangerous purpose and remarkable effectiveness, broke out here today in connection with the strike of the garment and shirt-waist employees. From results and disastrous consequences of the hat pins, the riot is regarded as the worst that has occurred in the city. One patrolman was rescued, beaten and bruised, with blood pouring from wounds made by the venemous use of hat pins by maddened women.

When the Press Feeds on Hysteria

By ROBERT MAYNARD

It is axiomatic in these times that when episodes of extraordinary violence occur, public officials — no less so than ordinary citizens — are prone to hyperbole. In the midst of trauma, we are given to "seeing" more than is actually there.

That truism is so well-known to the legal profession, for example, that some of its practitioners consider eyewitness testimony to dramatic crimes or accidents to be among the least reliable of available evidence.

This is so because "seeing" is far from an objective pursuit for most of us. What we "see" is merely an assemblage of impulses ordered largely by who we are.

That this is especially so when some spontaneous instance of drama crosses our vision ought to be manifest to those with the special chance of conveying the images of large events to the public mnd.

Thus, what the news media conveyed from the roof of the Howard Johnson Motor Hotel in New Orleans last week is especially instructve on this point. In the first hours of the awesome tragedy, we were told the arson and the killing were not the work of one lone deranged gunman, but the opening round in a nationwide war against the public order, therefore against any or all of us.

Hail of Gunfire

That, simply put, is what the embattled New Orleans police "saw" and felt in the midst of a hail of gunfire at about the time many in New Orleans were on their way to Sunday services. How many gunmen they were battling was in question then and was to remain in question for days afterward.

Even the number of the dead would in early reports total 11, only later to be scaled back to six. In the midst of the chaos, the police "saw" several bodies twice — or, at least that would become the explanation.

Then there was the queston of the phantom sniper, the dramatic television "live" action of the search for him and finally the plaintive conclusion about the second sniper from a fatigued superintendent of police, Clarence B. Giarusso: "I'm undecided. Right now we have evidence on both sides . . . I wouldn't say yes and I wouldn't say no." Any number of news organizations on Sunday evening were reporting as many as three snipers, and reporting it as pretty hard fact.

Police Exaggerate

But the fact in such chaotic situations is that the police almost always exaggerate. Who can forget Newark and Detroit in 1967, when the police were reporting the existence of snipers on rooftops everywhere? No such snipers ever were actually identified.

More than that, it was frequently the case that police officers and National Guardsmen were firing at each other, each reporting the other as a "sniper" position. It may be one of the ancillary tragedies of New Orleans that the police were shooting at another "sniper" long after Mark Essex was dead.

If the police over-dramatize, and if the media — having no other reliable source at the time — pass it along to their consumers, that is regrettable, but understandable. We would all benefit, I think, from restraint in such matters as action reports from the scene of ongoing events, to say less until hard information is available.

It is questionable, for example, whether CBS and NBC should have gone live with that rooftop drama. I say that not because it proved fruitless. I would have been more appalled at what might have been the case if indeed there had been a sniper. Would we have wanted all of the gory details live and in color? I suspect, in any event, edited film would have been more appropriate.

Miles Away

But I am more concerned by what the news media pass along to their consumers that is "seen" by persons either hundreds of miles away or only remotely connected to the event, even if on hand. I have particularly in mind the vision of the events in New Orleans as seen in The Washington Post by three political figures.

As though the facts of this tragedy — such hard facts as were known — were not mind-chilling enough, Sen. James O. Eastland of Mississippi felt called upon to add his own hyperbole, what he "saw" from a distance of more than 1,000 miles:

"The evidence is unmistakable that this is a war on policemen. We face a crisis in law enforcement unless we act immediately."

The Washington Post passed on that information to its readers without any evidence from Eastland, or any caveat. The newspaper did not state that Eastland offered evidence and did not state that we pursued him for evidence and received none. We either should have stated that he offered evidence, or stated that he did not offer evidence. Instead, we just dropped Eastland into the story underneath a similarly apocalyptic paragraph from the Louisiana attorney-general, William J. Guste:

"I am convinced that there is an underground, national suicide group bent on creating terror in America." Evidence? Apparently if the tragedy is of sufficient dramatic impact, scary observations have their own inherent defence and need no support.

But I think such circumstances need another component to qualify for the scary conclusion without a shred of support. They must contain either the elements of politics or race. It is doubtful if either Eastland or Guste would have been so quick with theories of conspiracy had not a black man — or men? — been involved. And not just a black man, but one who is alleged to have been overheard shouting, "Power to the people."

The most recent tragedy that is analagous to New Orleans occurred on Aug. 1, 1966, in Austin, Tex., when Charles Joseph Whitman, a white Marine veteran, stationed himself in the tower of the University of Texas and gunned down 13 people in 80 minutes. He was eventually killed by the police.

A cursory examination of the record of that tragedy fails to turn up any mention from Sen. Eastland of the danger of a national conspiracy. The argument that it was black racism motivating Essex may be true, but no story has explained yet how it is that his very first victim on New Year's Eve was a black police cadet.

Compound Crime

The point is not whether he was or was not politically motivated. The fact is that at this early point hardly any of that is actually known. So, the national news media, when it repeats the hyperbole of the police is perhaps to be understood, deadlines and hysteria being what they are in such circumstances. To add the hyperbole of Sen. Eastland, though, is to compound the crime, add to the hysteria but add nothing of substance to the news, which is supposed to be our business.

Hyperbole being what it is, it is not surprising that it takes many forms. In that same story, but a little further along than the Eastland embroidery, this paragraph is to be found:

"Mayor Landrieu called the nightmare of murder and arson 'perhaps the most tragic crimminal act in the history of this city.' " If mayors tend not to be historically sensitive, newspapers should either correct their lapses or withhold them from the public. At great cost, we maintain an elaborate library intended to serve as a check against the memories of politicians and reporters.

Lynched by Mob

As it happens, a criminal act occurred in New Orleans on March 14, 1891, that Mayor Landrieu — if he had time to reflect — might agree qualifies as at least a rival to the events at the Howard Johnson Motor Hotel. In fact, racial overtones are what gives it added historical significance by way of comparison.

The chief of police was killed that previous fall of 1890. A group identified as "Italian Mafia" was accused, tried and acquitted, 19 in all, according to Richard Hofstadter and Michael Wallace in "American Violence: A Documented History."

On that March 14, after 6,000 New Orleans citizens listened to stirring speeches by a number of persons, they were led to the jail by a lawyer named William Parkerson, who had told the crowd:

"When the law is powerless, the rights delegated by the people are relegated back to the people, and they are justified in doing that which the courts have failed to do." With that, Parkerson, according to Hofstadter and Wallace, "led fifty men to the jail and, as authorities stood by, they killed eleven of the Italians. Most were shot inside the jail, but some were dragged outside where the crowd lynched them."

It was onee said by an eminent journalist that our business at best is "writing the first rough draft of history." The emphasis in that formulation is obviously on the word rough.

In such a process we are bound to be excessive when the circumstances are dramatic. But we have a responsibility that senators and mayors, police chiefs and attorneys general don't have. That is the responsibility that accompanies the beleagured blessings of the First Amendment.

It is to be ever so restrained and thoughtful about the implications in the expressions of those with partisan interests in the stories we cover. Hyperbole has no place in the news.

From Isolation To Conscience

By ALVIN SHUSTER

STOCKHOLM — Now that the Swedish government has talked itself into another diplomatic tangle with Washington, the question has been raised anew here why this neutral country expresses more hostility toward the United States' role in Vietnam than any of America's other traditional friends.

The Swedes, rather shy in comparison with, say, the outgoing Danes, are themselves divided on the answer. Their neutrality has kept them out of wars since the Napoleonic era but their recent words have brought them trouble, particularly with a sensitive Washington.

"The reasons why we get so involved in world affairs are somewhat complex," said a Swedish diplomat. "One answer obviously is that we've solved our fundamental problems at home and we like to play an active international role within our definition of neutrality. There is a kind of idealism in Swedish life."

"Moral conscience is one factor," said a banker here. "More than that, the Swede, with his high standard of living, thinks he is so much better off than others that he wants to show compassion for the ill-treated elsewhere."

"When we broke out of our isolation, we woke up with a conscience," said Premier Olof Palme. "Our young people, our strong trade unions, are all active in world matters. The government reflects that."

Such high moral pronouncements are often viewed with cynicism by those with memories in neighboring Norway and Denmark. Many Danes, for example, are similarly unhappy over the American bombing but they also remember the Nazi occupation of their country in World War II when Sweden escaped untouched in neutrality.

To many outside, Sweden also appears to be addressing herself to the problems of others in increasingly ideological terms. It is a style that has irritated the United States government and the relations between the two countries fell to a low point with Washington's request that Stockholm withhold sending a new ambassador in retaliation for a statement by Palme likening the recent heavy bombing of Hanoi to Nazi atrocities.

Sweden's generous foreign aid program has gradually shifted more from underdeveloped countries, no matter what their governments, to left-wing governments such as those in Cuba, Chile and Tanzania and to the African nationalists fighting against Portugal and South Africa. She gives about $15 million a year in aid to North Vietnam.

In the view of some diplomats, however, Sweden, once the dominant and most aggressive power in Europe, still tries to tread carefully, despite the outward signs of pulpit-mounting.

PALME
. . . active in world

"Sweden's foreign policy can best be summed up as pragmatic," said one diplomat here. "She won't do anything to get herself on the wrong side of a government that can hurt her. She can say fairly harsh things about the United States in Vietnam without fearing very much except the occasional diplomatic rebuff.

"She chooses her words carefully about the Soviet Union — although she did denounce the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia. You don't hear much, for example, about the plight of the Jews in Russia."

Overkill at Home

MANCHESTER GUARDIAN
An Editorial

It was all too reminiscent of many a cops-and-robbers feature film, even down to the last grand shoot-out, the breaking down of the villain's stronghold, and a large audience waiting for the final and gory coup.

All the more banal and frustrating, therefore, that instead of the heroes marching away from the New Orelans hotel siege in justifiable triumph, there was bewilderment, recrimination, and an anti-climax of mass head-shaking when the police discovered that the cupboard was bare.

In the promised investigations there may now be an understandable tendency for the men of the law to find some substance for the original notion (still not entirely disproved) that more than one sniper was involved in the heart of the siege, and that, yes indeed, there probably was some kind of shoot-a-white-policeman conspiracy worked out by an extremist group.

So far there seems little to justify such hopes or fears, but some facts are indisputable. Most important, seven people were killed (including the sniper) and 17 injured in the two-day battle. Second, the siege followed a series of incidents in which the local police had been under fiire. Third, well-trained, well-armed Vietnam war veterans, usually black, are now among the ranks of criminals and political militants. Fourth, the siege has again shown how one skilled terrorist, madman or politically motivated, can paralyse a large section of a modern city and occupy hundreds of its police force for many hours (how did crime in the rest of New Orleans fare during that time?)

All that being said, it is also apparent that the readiness of some modern American police forces to be so paralysed, and to be drawn so massively into such a conflict, seems sometimes to take on the temporary proportions of a crusade, as if the continuance of the American way of life depends on a speedy settlement, no matter how it is achieved.

In New Orleans, indeed, the use of a Vietnam-style gunship helicopter and the 50,000 rounds fired by the police echo the overkill of B52s attempting to pound sense into Hanoi.

The urban gunman must be stopped, police and civilian lives protected, and a city freed to go about its business in relative peace as quickly as possible. But these situations will recur, and it is time that Americans and others rethought their tactics.

Overkill in war is a tactic that is already of doubtful value: at home it seems both ludicrous and deadly in the wrong way.

No wonder there is now the suspicion that injuries and perhaps death may have been caused by police bullets, and that the New Orleans police are amazed to realize that the last 18 hours of their battle may have been with a dead man. No wonder either that only a missing "superbrain" can be held as the justification for the use of such firepower.

Candy Is Dandy, But . . .

By GEORGE BAIN
The Globe and Mail

Among the many faults to be found with the Prime Minister's remarks the other day about national unity and the alleged divisivenes of some Conservative MPs — David Lewis put his finger on the fundamental one when he said: "He does not promote the unity of Canada by saying the kind of things he said this afternoon" — is the fact that they were not really very honest.

For instance, although it would be hard to say what responsibility the Conservatives could be said to have for an article in the Toronto Star, he was reminded, he said, of a headline which appeared in that newspaper during the election campaign. He went on:

"It will be recalled that at that time I had been talking about the Highways and Byways program which applied to all Canada. There was a headline in a reputable English-speaking newspaper . . . which read, 'PM Promises More Goodies to Quebec.' " His point was that no French-language newspaper, save perhaps a separatist one, would single out as goodies to the West, or some other part of the country, things which government might propose to do for them.

In fact, the story complained of appeared the day after the Prime Minister himself — to the great dismay, incidentally, of some of his colleagues — used the term "goodies" in a speech at Shawinigan. He said that, in a week or two, he would have some goodies to give out—or, as he said the term was in English, "candy".

Notwithstanding the assertion the other day that he had been "talking about the Highways and Byways program which applied to all Canada," the Highways and Byways program was not so much as mentioned for anyone to know what it applied to. What was mentioned — and all that was mentioned — was that the first of the promised goodies would be of interest to all present who were keen on field and stream.

It was a not unreasonable inference that he was talking about a particular goody for the particular area. In any case, it becomes hard to sustain a case that the reportage was a heavy-handed English-Canadian attempt to suggest favoritism to Quebec when it is added that the reporter who wrote the story, and inferred as above, was a French-Canadian.

Nor was it quite honest to accuse some Conservatives of exploiting the theme of French power for electoral advantage, which he said they had, without acknowledging that he, personally, and the Liberal Party in Quebec, did precisely the same thing for the same purpose.

It is all very well to say that "we do not count members by their ethnic origins, and we don't count votes according to whether they were cast by English or French-speaking Canadians," but the Liberals undeniably campaigned for members and votes by appeals to ethnicity.

There was, for a start, the celebrated campaign film used in Quebec in which several Quebec cabinet ministers boasted of the influence which they wielded in Ottawa; there were also the Prime Minister's repeated reminders to Quebec voters of the names of other French-Canadians who were in positions of power and influence — president of Air Canada, president of the CBC, chairman of the CRTC, and so on and so on.

Fair enough — although it would have been more praiseworthy (not to mention more consistent with the Liberal Party's boast that it speaks the same way in all parts of the country) if Mr. Trudeau and his colleagues had undertaken to explain and argue everywhere why it was desirable for the country as a whole that this increase of French power take place.

Obviously (it must have been obvious to Mr. Trudeau unless he was even more out of touch with the country than he has acknowledged yet) not everyone, everywhere, including members of the late Liberal caucus, had accepted the reality of the Canadian situation.

There was more of what was said the other day that was dismayingly awful. It was bad enough before when the distant vistas kept obscuring the issues, including the one above; is it really necessary in abandoning the Olympian heights to drop right into the ditches?

NDP Slow to Get Settled In Driving Seat: Warren

B.C. Conservative leader Derril Warren Wednesday night accused the NDP government of "abusing power" in its first four months in office.

Warren told a meeting of the Oak Bay conservative association that the Barrett government is taking an unusually long time in orienting itself to the business of governing and that it is not addressing itself adequately to the problems of the individual in British Columbia.

The Tory leader, who does not hold a seat in the legislature after narrowly losing out to the NDP's Colin Gablemann in North Vancouver-Seymour in the August election, criticized the New Democrats for adopting a negative attitude in many of their dealings with other governments, including the federal Liberal government.

WARREN
. . . positive approach

He said Barrett's recent trip to the state of Washington was made with the intention of discussing five problem areas — four of which he said are outside B.C.'s purisdiction. And he said Barrett's publicized squabble with federal environment minister Jack Davis was an example of a lack of political maturity on the part of the B.C. government.

Warren said the government should be doing more to establish priorities with the individual in mind and should be criticized for not doing so "even if the press is in love with the government."

He defended the principle of a free market economy, saying the presence of "many socialists" in the province should not be allowed to establish a state-run economy.

Warren said the two Conservative MLAs in the house — Oak Bay's Scott Wallace and Saanich-and-the-Islands' Hugh Curtis — will introduce several private members, bills in the legislative opening session next Thursday which will indicate the priorities of the Progressive Conservative party.

The bills will concern: the privacy of the individual; protection of children; establishment of a mechanism to aid injured workmen and their families; unemployment; municipalities; and senior citizens. Warren said the two MLAs will be "possitive in their approach" but will not hesitate to be critical of the government if it is decided criticism is necessary.

Worthwhile legislation from the government will get Tory support, he said, as long as it does something to resolve the problems facing the province.

Warren said he will attend sittings of the house as often as possible and will watch from his seat in the public galleries. The Tory leader was the target of a considerable amount of humor from other parties in the special session October, in which he communicated with the members on the floor of the house through messages passed down from his seat in the gallery.

Warren drew a large round of applause for his comment that he will continue to try to win a seat in the legislature. He told the Times following his address that he will not necessarily go after the first vacancy which presents itslf, unless it happens to be a Lower Mainland suburban riding.

Warren also commented afte the meeting on recent statements from members of other opposition parties, indicating support for his idea of a united opposition party to face the NDP government as a single force.

He said the statements of support from Social Credit house leader Frank Richter and from Liberal Allan Williams are a step towards possible attainment of such a united group but added that much discussion will have to take place before anything firm can be decided. He said he does not consider it a condition that the leader of such a united party be a Conservative, or that the party be Conservative-dominated. Such a party arrangement should be a completely open matter, he said.

Fall Fatal

VANCOUVER (CP) — Roman J. Burlaka, 34, fell five storeys to his death early Tuesday, police said, after he had crawled along a narrow ledge outside the building to awaken a roommate in a locked bedroom.

Blacklist, Probe Dropped At Campbell River Schools

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Teachers' Federation will lift its blacklisting of the principalship of Campbell River senior secondary and postpone indefinitely plans for a commission to investigate learning conditions in the district.

BCTF president Adam Robertson said Wednesday the federation's executive committee approved the action after Chris Taylor, the new school superintendent in Campbell River, said easing the BCTF's position would assist him in building harmony in the district.

The blacklisting of the principal's position was linked with the firing of John Young.

When Young was fired in September, the BCTF declared the principalship "in dispute", meaning any federation member taking the job could be disciplined for breaking the organization's code of ethics.

William Fogg, the district's acting director of instruction, has been acting principal in Campbell River since Young's dismissal.

The plan to set up an investigative committee was sparked by the local teachers' association, which complained to BCTF leaders in September that educational conditions in the district had deteriorated alarmingly.

Robertson said it appeared the deterioration was caused by the school board's crackdown on Young and by the education finance cutback of the former Social Credit administration, He said the federation would take a thorough look at the over-all situation there.

Oak Bay Tackles Rugby Field Wear

Concerned about the deterioration of the pitches through overuse, municipal engineer-planner Geoffrey White told Oak Bay's parks and recreation committee Wednesday night:

"I know, basically, we've got to cut down use of some pitches a helluva lot. I know of one rugby pitch that's had as many as two games in one day. That's ridiculous."

Ald. Douglas Watts suggested that teams ignoring edicts by the works superintendent and recreation commission director Mrs. Isabelle Craig that a pitch was unfit for use should face penalties.

Letters from the parks administrators of Victoria and Saanich, outlining how they scheduled use of pitches were studied.

In a memo on the reports from the Saanich and Victoria officials White said:

"To summarize, both these gentlemen advise that the maximum use should be one rugby football game per week per pitch and practice rugby should be in soft shoes. This is in line with your engineer's previous experience.

"If it is adhered to, then some careful pruning of the use of our pitches would be needed and it is suggested that we examine which teams using our pitches are comprised of a majority of Oak Bay residents."

White was instructed to draw up a suggested schedule and gather all available data on pitch maintenance for study by the committee and the recreation commission.

School Review Rejected

University of Victoria senate rejected a suggestion Wednesday that the proposed new School of Administration be reviewed every five years.

Dr. Kenneth Rankin, chairman of the philosophy department, proposed the periodic review to determine whether the school should continue to exist.

"I think we might as well 'give up'" if the motion were passed, Dr. Stephen Jennings warned senate during debate on the motion. Jennings, dean of graduate studies, is on the committee appointed to select a director for the new school.

Dr. G. A. Miller agreed with Jennings, saying the suggestion was an "implied put-down" of the new school which would make it impossible to get a good staff for it.

Rankin said that in setting up the school the university was assuming a market for its graduates would always be there, but that might change.

He also said that conflict might develop between this "vocational-type course" and existing academic courses.

The graduate-level school was approved by senate last fall. The university had asked for extra money to set it up, "which we may or may not get," president Hugh Farquhar told senate members.

A motion by Canon Hilary Butler to appoint a faculty advisor to each university student also ran into criticism and was eventually tabled.

Butler suggested a committee examine the possibility of cutting through some of the regulations regarding courses that, he said, have tied some students into knots.

Rather than being guided by many regulations, Butler suggested, the student would work out his academic program with his faculty adviser and at the same time establish "genuine contact" between student and teacher.

Dr. William Gordon, assistant dean of the faculty of arts and science, opposed the motion saying it was "smashing the existing degree program" which still suited many students.

Dean Peter Smith of the fine arts faculty reminded Butler that a faculty adviser system had been tried at the university several years ago.

"I have lived through the previous system and have seen the chaos that can result when faculty members are given responsibility for advising students," Smith said.

"I think what is needed is skilled ad expert academic advice," he said.

REPORT TOP PRIORITY

University of Victoria president Dr. Hugh Farquhar made it clear Wednesday night that consideration of the MacLaurin report on academic development is his number one priority for Senate.

"The faster you can move on this the better I'd like it," Farquhar told Senate at its January meeting.

Senate decided to wait until its March meeting to begin discussing the report, to allow faculty to discuss it thoroughly.

The report, released in December, is the result of a six-month study last year into basic academic goals and purposes of the university. Dr. D. J. MacLaurin headed the six-man commission appointed by Farquhar soon after he took office.

A motion passed to get faculty opinion on the report before Senate acts on it raised objections from Canon Hilary Butler.

"The report is a matter of concern not just to the faculty, not just to the students but to the whole community," Butler said.

"I am concerned that all that matters in Senate in faculty opinion and I strongly disagree with it," he added.

"I have been conscious of our weakness in this respect," Farquhar told him.

Senate agreed that students and alumnae be given an opportunity to discuss the report.

Three Senate appointments to the Board of Governors were announced at Wednesday's meeting: Canon Hilary Butler, new Senate member Dr. Ken Thornton, pathologist at Royal Jubilee Hospital, and Dr. K. O. Wright, of the Dominion Asytrophysical Observatory.

New Courses Approved

Buddhist art, British Columbia history and beginners' French are among new courses that received approval from University of Victoria senate Wednesday.

Senate approved curriculum changes for faculties of fine arts, arts and science, education and graduate studies which will appear in the 1973-74 calendar, due some time in April.

Few of the new courses raised objections from the senate, but Dr. Leo Bakony, chairman of the economics department, questioned the validity of a proposed Physics of the Environment course.

Other departments like geography have already "staked a claim" on the environment territory, Bakony suggested.

Scientists like Dr. Kenneth Moss of the chemistry department leaped to the defence of the physics course, saying that engineers and scientists are doing the main work today on environmental problems.

The faculty of graduate studies is changing its entrance requirements to allow people in the community to take a graduate course simply to improve their academic background.

To take a graduate course a student will need proper academic qualifications, but he will no longer have to be taking the course for credit towards a degree.

CHICAGO (AP) — Old crop soybean and soybean meal futures advanced the allowable limites for the third consecutive session on the board of trade.

The two nearby soybean options advanced the limit of 10 cents, and three meal options gained the limit of $5.

The expiring January meal option rose $6 a ton, but it i not limited in price movements during its expriing month.

Old crop wheat futures fell some 6 cents a bushel while corn prices were irregular at the close. Oats eased around 1 cent and soybean oil closed on a mixed tone.

The buying in nearby soybeans and meal again was influenced by a good demand for these products at the cash level, the wrather and a trade feeling that available stocks are tightening up.

At the close, soybeans were up 10 Jan. 4.69½; wheat down 6 March 2.60; corn prices irregular, March 1.57¾ and oats down 1 March 93¾.

Gold Issues Slide In TSE Trading

Gold issues continued to drop lower while most other prices at Toronto recorded moderate gains in active mid-afternoon trading today.

Volume by 2 p.m. was 2.58 million shares compared with 2.47 million traded by the same time Wednesday.

Among sectors of the market showing increases were bank, beverage, industrrial mining and merchandising stocks while chemical, oil refining, pipeline and steel issues were lower.

Advances were ahead of declines 258 to 214 while 269 issues remained unchanged.

Great West Life Assurance rose 1½ to $79, Keen Industries 1⅛ to $11⅜, Interprovincial Steel and Pipe 1 to $17, Silverwood B 1 to $17 and Union Oil 1 to $21.

New York

Stock market prices moved higher again at New York, pushed by positive economic news and encouraging developments regarding Vietnam peace.

The 2 p.m. Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 3.54 to 1,032.66, and advances on the New York Stock Exchange edged declines 736 to 600.

A bullish influence on the market was news that a U.S. commerce department report was expected to show the gross national product in the fourth quarter of 1972 had a "real" gain of 8.5 per cent.

Montreal

Most sectors declined in moderate trading at Montreal.

Combined volume on the Montreal and Canadian stock exchanges at 1 p.m. was 1.1 million shares, compared with 850,000 at the same time Wednesday.

London

Stock market prices dropped sharply lower today, following press comment and analysts' views on the British government's new program to fight inflation through wage and price controls.

VSE Halts Trading In Four Companies

The British Columbia Securities Commission has issued temporary suspensions to four companies on the Vancouver Stock Exchange for failure to file financial statements.

Suspended are shares of Centex Mines, Tiki Development Corporation, Mercury Explorations and Jordesco Resources Ltd.

Mercury Explorations was suspended for failure to provide reports on insider trading and proxy solicitations as well as financial statements.

For the first time the provincial securities commission is publicizing insider trading on the Vancouver Stock Exchange. First report will be in the monthly bulletin of the Ontario Securities Commission at month's end. B.C. insider reports are being published in the Ontario bulletin as an interim measure.

The B.C. Securities Commission, in its weekly bulletin, reports that it has extended the suspension of shares of Portage Gold Mines Ltd. The commission has the authority to extend suspensions if reports are not filed following temporary suspensions.

Temporary suspensions are for 15 days.

The commission said it has rescinded earlier suspensions of Share Mines and Oils Ltd., Consolidated Ad Astra Minerals Ltd. and Trans-Canada Enviro-Systems Ltd.

The companies were reinstated on the Vancouver Stock Exchange after filing financial statements with the commission.

BBC Realty Investors and Primer Group Minerals Ltd. have informed the commission that they have completed primary distribution of their shares.

Drill Rigs Ready for Peace Parcels

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

A busy drilling program is building to a climax in the Peace River area against the background of oil and gas shortages and leaping prices.

At the request of oil companies, the provincial government has made a record 210 parcels of land available for bids in the Jan. 31 competition. Some 748,000 acres are involved.

Most of the parcels will be drilling reservations and leases rather than exploration property. Many companies have already marked out areas for drilling and are ready to proceed now that the peak drilling season has arrived.

Peace River drilling is carried out between January and April while muskeg land is frozen and transportation is relatively easy.

Drilling is already under way on leases granted in earlier bidding competitions.

At present there are 24 drilling rigs at work, although the season is just beginning.

A peak of 40 rigs is expected after the sale, the number restricted only because that is about all that will be available.

Major reason for the growing interest in the Peace River region is that natural gas prices are going up and the gas can readily be brought to market as soon as it is located.

The area is already well-laced with pipelines. Although gas and oil fields are relatively minor, they are in a low-cost area, because of the ease of transportation.

It carries natural gas to the Vancouver area.

Inland Natural Gas Company has a 624-mile line to carry gas from the Peace River to the Cariboo, Okanagan and West Kootenay.

There are two main crude oil pipelines. Trans Prairie Pipelines Ltd. gathers oil from fields scattered north and east of Fort St. John while British Columbia Oil Transmission Company gathers from an area northwest of Fort St. John.

Both lines deliver crude oil to the terminal facilities of Western Pacific Products and Crude Oil Pipelines Ltd. at Taylor, southeast of Fort St. John.

Some oil is refined at Taylor and Prince George but most is transported in Western Pacific's 505-mile 12-inch pipe to Kamloops. In turn a small amount is refined there but the bulk is piped to connect with the Edmonton-to-Vancouver Trans Mountain Oil Pipe Line Company pipe.

The crude is carried to refineries in Vancouver and Washington State.

Development of the Peace River has been concentrated mainly in the past 20 years. In 1953 there were only three gasfields located. First commercial oil discovery was made in 1955.

While all oil companies are participating in the Peace River development, it is particularly attractive for small companies because exploration and development costs are low and finds are usually small.

Meanwhile, the big companies are concentrating their major efforts in what is called in the trade "elephant country", the high-cost, big find Arctic.

The big companies are also pressing the search for offshore oil and gas, particularly on the Atlantic coast, although there has been a resumption in activity off the west coast of Vancouver Island.

Most of the activity in the Canadian Pacific consisted of seismic exploration, as weather permits, in the open Pacific and near the Queen Charlotte Islands.

While the January 31 bidding will be aimed mainly at obtaining drilling permits, a subsequent competition in April will be mainly for large-acreage exploration permits.

The department of mines and petroleum resources this week set the next bidding date for April 4 with deadline for posting requests set for Feb. 6.

TAX TIPS

This information is supplied by the federal department of national revenue. If further details are required, contact the Victoria District Taxation Office between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. at 388-3551. For those living outside the Victoria exchange area, ask the long-distance operator for Zenith 0-4000 and the call will be placed without charge.

Q. How about the exemption for a child who was 18 years of age or older at the end of a taxation year?

A. If the net income of the child for the year is not more than $1,050, the allowable personal exemption is $550. Where the net income of the dependent child is over $1,050, but not over $1,600, the exemption of $550 must be reduced by the amount of the child's net income over $1,050. If the child's net income exceeds $1,600, once again that child is not a dependant for income tax purposes.

Q. I am a widow supporting a 16-year-old son who is in receipt of an orphan's benefit as well as other pension benefits totalling $400 for the year. I understand that I can no longer claim the full equivalent of married exemption. Is this correct?

A. Yes. Commencing in 1972 if the dependent person's income is in excess of $250 then the full exemption cannot be claimed. Your married equivalent exemption will be $1,200 ($1,600 less $400) and not $1,350.

Q. Is it correct, there was no change for the 1972 taxation year in the rules for calculating personal exemptions for supporting wholly dependent children?

A. That is not quite correct. Prior to 1972, if a child's net income exceeded $950, that child would not usually qualify as a dependant for income tax purposes. For 1972 and subsequent years, that income limitation has been changed.

Q. What about changes in allowable deductions from income?

A. With regard to deductions from income, the personal exemption has been raised to $1,500 from $1,000 for single persons, and to $2,850 from $2,000 for married persons. In addition, all taxpayers age 65 and over will receive a special exemption of $1,000.

Q. I have heard a great deal in recent months about tax reform and how I may be affected by it. Is there any one area which will concern everyone?

A. Changes which have been made in the allowable personal exemptions will affect all of us when we file 1972 income tax returns in the early part of 1973.

Japanese Housing Boom Benefit to B.C. Lumber

VANCOUVER (CP) — A housing boom in Japan has brightened marketing prospects for the lumber business in B.C.

The price of sawlogs on the lower B.C. coast is being pushed up by as much as 50 per cent as Japanese buyers move into the market in an attempt to meet a tremendous demand for lumber in their own country.

The current rising market has lasted more than three years. Although there is uncertainty about developments in the United States, Canada's largest customer, the European market remains strong.

A forest company spokesman said an upturn in non-residential construction could prevent a decline in American sales caused by an anticipated cut in the U.S. housing program.

A resurgence of Japanese demand has caused the trading companies to manufacture their lumber here rather than ship raw logs to Japan. And in a sense, the Japanese outsmarted themselves.

The Japanese cut back on lumber purchases last year, taking only 228 million board feet from B.C. in the first nine months of 1972 compared with 407 million board feet in all of 1971 and 1970.

Forest industry executives believe the Japanese allowed their purchases to drop because they thought the U.S. market would slacken, causing lumber prices to fall.

When this failed to happen, the Japanese were faced with diminished stocks and a voracious appetite for lumber.

Reports from Japan indiate the lumber shortage there has reached crisis proportions because of a housing boom and delay in purchases. Prime Minister Tanaka's government has ordered a special mission to buy building supplies.

One buyer said prices had risen during the past three months to $160 from $120 for 1,000 board feet of hemlock.

FIVE DELISTED

VANCOUVER (CP) — Shares of five Vancouver-based junior industrial companies were delisted by the Vancouver Stock Exchange Wednesday. All five had been suspended from trading for some time.

The companies are 4-F Foods Ld., International Space Modules Ltd., Dog 'N Suds Food Services Ltd., Marlex Enviro-Systems and Resources Ltd. and the Preference Shares of Imperial Marine Industries Ltd.

The exchange said the stocks were removed from the trading list because the companies had not complied with listing requirements. The companies may apply for relisting in the future if they are able to meet VSE requirements.

Imperial Marine's common shares which traded Wednesday in the 30-40 cents range, remain on the VSE list.

The company's preference shares were issued in at $2 each March last year by means of a rights offering to common shareholders. The stock traded for a short period and was then suspended in April at a price of $1.50.

Imperial Marine agreed to redeem the preference shares at $2 each after the VSE ruled that the issue had been made null and void by the failure of a brokerage firm to fulfill a commitment relating to the issue of rights which led to the preference share issue.

Photos Indicate Watery Martian Past

WASHINGTON — Scientists analyzing the pictures of Mars taken by Mariner 9 said Wednesday they show three kinds of dried-out riverbeds, suggesting that water flooded the planet from more than one source during its chaotic past.

The Martian channels (there are dozens) not only appear to have been formed at different times in Martian history, the scientists told a press conference Wednesday, they also look as if they were created by different events, such as melting of the permafrost under the polar caps or a discharge of water from the volcanoes that litter the planet surface.

The scientists have evidence that water is even today being discharged into the thin Martian atmosphere out of three extinct volcanoes in what corresponds to the Martian "tropical zone." The evidence lies in Mariner 9 photographs that show huge cirus clouds of ice being blown across the volcano floors.

"We think there are at least two sources for water on the planet," the U.S. Geological Survey's Dr. Harold Masursky said. "One is the melting of the water ice under the carbon dioxide polar caps, the other is the melting of permafrost regions that lie under the caps and just outside the caps."

New Mexico University geologist Bradford Smith said the river beds on Mars are dried up because the ice and permafrost probably melt no more than once every 50,000 years and maybe no more than once every two million years.

"The melting takes place when the orbit of Mars goes from circular to elliptical, which takes the planet nearer to the sun," Dr. Smith said. "This is caused by perturbations of other planets, primarily Jupiter and Saturn."

Mariner scientist said the pictures of Mars brought home once and for all the great size of the events that have shaped the red planet through geological time.

The Hellas Basin on Mars is twice the size of the giant Sea of Rains on the moon, the terraced volcanic calderas (extinct volcanoes) are all larger than the Hawaiian Islands, and the rift valley that runs across the Martian equator and is as deep as the Grand Canyon would stretch from San Francisco to Washington.

Dizziness Drug Still Sold

OTTAWA (CP) — A drug being marketed to combat dizziness, ordered withdrawn from sale in the United States, is still being sold on prescription in Canada, federal health department officials said.

Official reason given for the U.S. ban was that the drug doesn't work, but other reports said it increased dizziness.

Alex Morrison, head of the federal health protection branch, said he was aware of the U.S. action and the matter is "under study."

Health department officials confirmed that the drug, Serc, marketed by Unimed Inc. of Montreal, remains on sale by prescription in Canada.

The U.S. food and drug administration withdrew marketing approval Dec. 21 for Serc and said later stocks already on the market were being recalled.

The U.S. drug administration said the drug was ordered withdrawn because there was no indication it performed as advertised.

TENANTS HOPE A-G WILL HELP

Representatives of the B.C. Tenants Organization who met Attorney-General Alex Macdonald Wednesday said later they were optimistic that some major changes will be made in the Landlord and Tenant Act.

Among them, said BCTO president Bruce Yorke, could be a response to an urgent need of all tenants—that landlords be required to give just cause for eviction.

He said the delegation received the "general impression" that the changes would be introduced at the spring session of the legislature, but if not certainly at the fall session. But no commitment was given.

Yorke said the organization's six-page brief reminded the government of certain pre-election pledges of action on landlord-tenant matters, and reiterated several requests it had previously made.

The demands included:

—Establishment of rent review boards in all major municipalities, with power to hear cases involving rent increases and hand down "non-binding findings."

—Institution of collective bargaining procedures which would recognize the right of bona fide tenant associations, in apartment blocks of six suites or more, to negotiate rental conditions with landlords.

—Assurance of a basic security for all tenants, by requiring landlords to justify any instance of eviction, on grounds of serious rent arrears, abuse of the rented premises or other reasons.

—Action by the provincial government to improve the general availability of housing, on "a non-ghetto approach and lease basis."

Yorke predicted that among the early actions the government will take will be the elimination of the contentious security deposit, which he noted is prohibited by provincial statute although there is a loophole allowing municipalities to stipulate such deposits.

Houle Fills Hab Breach

By Canadian Press

Will success deter Rejean Houle?

Reported recently to be in coach Scotty Bowman's doghouse and headed for the rich spoils of World Hockey Association stardom in Quebec City next year, the slight 23-year-old forward may have second thoughts after Wednesday night.

Houle scored three times to spearhead Canadiens' 6-4 win over Pittsburgh Penguins to move Montreal five points atop the National Hockey League's East Division standings.

Goals had been a rare commodity for the native of Rouyn, Que., in his three seasons as a regular with Montreal and his reported rifts with Bowman weren't geared to improve the situation.

Used sparingly in recent weeks, Houle got a full shift with the high-flying Montrealers when Yvan Cournoyer was sidelined, leaving a spot open on the club's top-scoring unit with Jacques Lemaire and Chuck Lefley.

And Houle capitalized on the opportunity, lifting his season's goal production to eight—just three back of his career high 11 tallied in 77 games a year ago.

Elsewhere the scores were: Chicago Black Hawks 6, Detroit Red Wings 4; Atlanta Flames 3, St. Louis Blues 3; Toronto Maple Leafs 3, California Golden Seals 3; New York Rangers 4, Los Angeles Kings 4.

Except for Houle, a 5-foot-11 165-pounder, the Penguins might have stolen the game after beating rookie goaltender Wayne Thomas with two of their five shots in the first period to take a 2-0 lead.

The Penguins dominated play in the second period, holding a 12-9 advantage in shots but Montreal held a 3-2 edge in scoring. Houle's third goal of the game, 24 seconds into the final period, finally brought the Canadiens even and defenceman Bob Murdoch's first goal of the year 27 seconds later proved the winner.

The Black Hawks also had to come from behind with third-period goals by Cliff Koroll, J. P. Bordeleau and Dick Redmond to continue their domination of the Red Wings.

The loss ended Detroit's six-game winning streak and stretched their losing string to the Hawks to 14 straight games. The 15,007 Olympia fans saw the Wings go down struggling, blistering Chicago goalie Gary Smith with 37 shots.

The Wings, on the strength of Mickey Redmond's 28th and 29th goals, had held period leads of 3-2 and 4-3 before Chicago's scoring blitz.

Odds, 'Vigorish', And Morning Line

Glad you asked. Odds intrigue me, and always have. And for the life of me, I can't figure out how Washington Redskins went into the SuperBowl game with a point spread over the Miami Dolphins.

Not only that. But the Skins were the choice right from the beginning. One day it was one point. The next it was two, and finally it was a two and one-half point spread. At the finish Miami had won handily, and should have won by a bigger margin than they did. I don't think it was an upset at all. It's simply that the odds-makers were wrong.

How does it work? Well, at the beginning it's something like horse racing. At the track, for instance, there is what is called the "morning line". Those are the odds the resident track expert, and handicapper, suggests should apply to the horses running in any particular race. The betting starts from there. After that it is up to the bettor to determine what the odds will be. The more money placed on a particular horse the shorter the price that horse will be, and the less it will pay if it wins.

Thus a favorite is determined by the action of the betting public, and often isn't the best horse in the race either. This is one reason, but not the only one, that the favorite wins only about 30 per cent of the time.

A Fair Line the Bookie's Edge

In football, there is also a resident expert. He is the man behind the scenes, and he dictates the "line". He sets the point spread between teams; and just as long as he is good at his job, he keeps it.

What normally happens is that a week before the game, this expert puts out what is called a "shoppers line". The public reaction is awaited. If the "line" is fair each team should get about the same amount of attention. If one team appears to be getting an undue amount of action then a revision is made, perhaps a point is dropped, and the second point spread becomes the "official line."

Bookies have their own unique ways of doing things. Some, the bigger ones, have their own experts. Others may form a co-operative and buy the service. Fellows like "Jimmie The Greek", one of the most famous of all odds-makers, sells his product to a large clientele of TV, radio, and press accounts. And the idea, basically, from a bookie viewpoint, is that point spread is such that an equal number of customers be attracted for each team. That gives the bookie his edge.

How? That's easy. Because the bookie has another rule, and it's the only way he can operate. It's called "vigorish", and he gets it one way or another. Say, for example, you bet $500, and win. You get paid off the $500. But say you lose. You don't pay out $500. No, you pay $550. The extra $50 is "vigorish", or the bookie's edge.

No Payoffs for Sentiment

The experts and bookies aren't always right, either. There was the story that many bookies got burned, "good" is the word, when Dallas crushed Miami last year. One reason is that Dallas went in with only a five-point spread over Miami when it should have been much more. The action was hot, and most of it was on Dallas. The spread kept climbing, and one desperate bookie even went to 19 points to try and get off the hook. No dice. Dallas won 24-3.

Jimmie the Greek said afterwards that although he picked Dallas by seven, "in my better judgment it should have been 13."

So, even the best can be swayed. Sentiment often enters into the picture. This year, first president Nixon got into the act by picking the Redskins; and after all, hadn't the Redskins stopped the powerful running of Green Bay and Dallas in the playoffs; and wasn't this suddenly the famed "over-the-hill gang"?

The old men wouldn't let George Allen down. There was a real tug there!

But really, Tricky Dick had no business making a prediction. He doesn't win too many. And didn't the Dolphins look just as convincing in coming from behind, twice, against Cleveland, and Pittsburgh, and wasn't Miami "a young team, on the way up?

And finally, weren't the Dolphins undefeated?

Yes, and they still are.

Not only was this the biggest overlay of the year. It was also the best bet.

Speaking of overlays, next week; another lesson in handicapping.

THERE'S PROVING TO DO AFTER DEREK GETS JOB

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — "Derek Sanderson has some proving to do," says the lawyer who got the controversial hockey player a contract settlement with the World Hockey Association's Philadelphia Blazers worth a reported $1 million.

The lawyer, Bob Woolf, agreed that Sanderson emerged from the bizarre, unprecidented Blazers' negotiations Wednesday with somewhat of a tarnished image. The hockey team bought up Sanderson's 10-year $2.4 million contract and gave him his unconditional release.

Woolf declined to disclose what the settlement was worth, but did say "it was awfully high."

"In some respects," said Woolf at a news conference, at which Sanderson's cash settlement was announced, "he (Sanderson) didn't act the way he should have and I was somewhat disappointed in him.

"In reflection, he (Sanderson) doesn't think he acted properly. He perhaps didn't do some things he should have done. His attitude was not what it should have been. Derek has some proving to do and I think he feels that way too."

Woolf hastened to note that he wasn't downgrading his client, that Sanderson was a standout hockey player with a personality that would help some team. He said Sanderson was in Jamaica and would be back in two weeks to start looking for another hockey job.

Here's How to Smile While Saying 'Ouch'

Special to the Times

WINNIPEG — Gerry Brisson's job may be secure, for the time being, because Winnipeg Jets refuted club president Ben Hatskin's charge that the Western Canada Junior Hockey League team is composed of "born losers."

Smarting from Hatskin's assessment, the Jets took their anger out on Victoria Cougars Wednesday by humiliating the visiting West Coast team 16-0.

It was the most one-sided result in the league this season, and Cougars' worst beating since Victoria's admission into major junior hockey.

But whoa, now. "Don't wave the white flag (of surrender)," said co-coach Bob Briscoe. "Sure we're embarassed. But it was one of those nights when everything worked for them and nothing went right for us.

"I'm not upset, but will be if it happens again tonight in Brandon."

Hatskin did his bit to get the Jets off the ground by publicly declaring his players were "born losers." At the same time, Winnipeg papers suggested that Brisson's job as coach of the Jets was on the line.

That put the Jets "in the mood" for greeting the Cougars, playing their fourth game in five days and the first of seven on a Prairie swing. The grind continues tonight in Brandon.

The surprising thing about Wednesday's humiliation is that both Briscoe and coaching cohort Eric Bishop both leaped to the defence of their players. Bishop, who can be as caustic as Hatskin, wrote it off as "an incredible thing."

"If I am allowed to smile after a result like that, I have to say that (Dale) Cook and (Dave) Faulkner played their best games in weeks. But I have to feel sorry for (goalkeeper) Danny Rogers. He didn't have a chance."

Rogers allowed nine goals in the first two periods, gave way to Perry Mulhall at the start of the third but returned when the backup goalie suffered a hand bruise after allowing two more goals.

Strike Hampers Sports

Problems have cropped up in at least two of the city athletic circles as a result of the maintenance workers' strike against the Greater Victoria school board.

Ed Ashmore, organizer of the Vancouver Island junior wrestling trials, has not been able to distribute entry forms through all schools and the meet is scheduled for Saturday at the YM-YWCA.

Elsewhere, the strike has forced cancellation of a pair of weekend exhibition basketball games by the senior "A" Victoria Scorpion Men's Wear.

Ashmore said today that weigh-ins for the regional-level competition will start at 9:30 a.m. and the actual wrestling program is expected to get under way at 12 noon.

The competitions, from which wrestlers will be selected to attend the provincial championships Jan. 26 and 27 in Coquitlam, are limited to boys between the ages of 14 and 18 years who are holders of a current B.C. Amateur Wrestling Association card. Memberships may be obtained prior to the weigh-in for $1.

Entry fee for the trials is $1 and competitors must have proof of age at the weigh-in as well as a parent, guardian or note of consent. Further information is available by telephoning the "Y" at 386-7511.

Scorpions were scheduled to play Richmond Rebels at Central Junior High School in Saturday and Sunday games. But because of the strike, the gym is not available.

Oak Bay Surge Scuttles Plans

Oak Bay Bays ruined coach Tom Hatcher's ball-control plans with 10 straight points in the late stages of the first half en route to a 64-41 Inter-High School Boys' Basketball League win over host Belmont Braves on Wednesday.

The win moved Bays into a three-way tie for the lead with Victoria Totems and Mount View Hornets.

Braves were leading 24-23 when the slow and deliberate tactics dissolved under the Bay onslaught, which produced a 33-24 lead at the intermission.

Clansmen Pilot Doubts Value of League Entry

By JIM CRERAR

Times Staff

Three months ago, Simon Fraser Clansmen coach John Kootnekoff was willing to enter the Canada West University Athletic Association men's basketball conference. Now he's not so sure it's a good idea.

That might seem like a pretty quick about-face, but Kootnekoff explained his thinking Wednesday night after his SFU squad dunked University of Victoria Vikings 62-46 in an exhibition game before a full house at UVic Gym.

Simon Fraser, it turns out, can't get into the league without changing its recruiting policies. That undoubtedly will mean modifying its athletic scholarship program.

Kootnekoff simply doesn't think it's worth it.

"We get excellent competition against U.S. schools in the exhibition schedule we play," he pointed out, "and abut the farthest we have to travel without a guarantee is to Portland."

But at Christmas, SFU travelled to Brandon and Winnipeg and the five-day tour cost $2,150.

"That hurt," Kootnekoff said. "It was a big chunk out of our budget."

Big enough, apparently, to create second thoughts about long trips to Edmonton and Saskatoon for league games.

In addition, Kootnekoff discovered Simon Fraser wasn't the only Canadian college basketball team with lots of U.S. talent.

"There's so much politics involved in the thing," he said, referring to the Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Unions' stance against luring imports north with scholarships.

"Brandon University has seven Americans on its club and an American coach," Kootnekoff said. "The University of Winnipeg has six or seven Americans on its club.

"Believe me, they don't come up here because they love snow."

Regardless of Kootnekoff's feelings, Simon Fraser may make a formal application to join the Canada West Association in May.

Wednesday night Clansmen had little trouble with Vikings after the first half, in which UVic spurted to an early lead and trailed by only two points, 30-28, at the break.

But SFU locked up the outcome with a flurry at the beginning of the second half and dominated play from then on.

High point came about five minutes into the half when Simon Fraser's Rick Kazanowksi was tossed from the game for landing an elbow smash to the face of Vikings' Tom Holmes.

Holmes also left the game with blood streaming from a cut near his right eye that required five stitches. He returned late in the game.

It wasn't a complete washout for UVic, however, as the Jayvees came up with a brilliant defensive performance in the second half to wipe out a 14-point deficit and beat SFU Jayvees, 71-69, in a preliminary game. UVic now has a 9-3 exhibition record, including a split with SFU.

5,000 Steelhead Smolt Being Planted in Spring

Hatchery - raised steelhead are here.

At long last, the dream of streams and pools abounding with trophy trout may be a reality. George Reid, Vancouver Island regional fisheries biologist, has announced that 5,000 steelhead smolts will be planted in Island streams this spring. 2,500 will go in the Puntledge River and 2,500 to Millstream Creek with repeated plantings every spring.

The fish to be planted come from the Abbotsford provincial hatchery where they have been raised in rearing ponds for the past two years. They originate from Big Qualicum steelhead and, when released, will range up to eight inches.

After their two-year stay at sea, they will return to their parent stream to spawn.

"The reason the Puntledge was chosen," Reid said, is that it is close to an urban centre and has had steadily declining success for anglers in recent years. The hydro dam has stopped the movement of gravel downstream, with the result that there is no spawning gravel left."

Millstream Creek in Nanaimo meets similar requirements for stocking. However, Reid said that Millstream Creek is to be regulated as a children's fishery only.

Reid had considered the Cowichan as a third stream needing stocking, but he felt it "could be a disaster" to wild stock in the river. According to Reid, no other stream on the Island requires stocking, or meets the requirements of the branch's stocking policy.

The program, however, raises some questions.

For example, what if the Puntledge river wild stock becomes genetically polluted, resulting in smaller steelhead? Big Qualicum fish are smaller, never going over 18 pounds, but the Puntledge annually provides fish in the 20-pound-plus class.

"This trait will be lost and steelhead in the Puntledge will revert to the small fish,"Reid admitted.

What if the hatchery stock introduces disease?

"This is possible when you control diet, competition and disease in a hatchery and reduce the 95-per-cent natural mortality rate to 50 per cent;" Reid said. He added that even when hatchery stock is taken from a stream's natural stock, it is not adapted to the conditions of the stream because of hatchery controls.

"These controls will also provide a place for disease to grow," he said.

What if the hatchery stock mingles and eventually destroys the rare fall steelhead run on the Puntledge in late October?

"All evidence points that this won't happen," Reid replied.

Former City Skater Shines

Special to the Times

VANCOUVER — A 16-year-old girl who started figure skating in Victoria stole the show from the internationally-recognized Karen Magnussen in the Canadian championships at the Forum here Wednesday.

Lynn Nightingale, a former Victoria Figure Skating Club member who moved to Ottawa a few years ago, drew a thunderous applause when she out-scored the defending champion from Vancouver in the compulsory free skating portion of the women's singles competition.

Miss Magnussen, however, retained her hold on first place, thanks to her first-place performances in Tuesday's compulsory figures, and remains the strong favorite in competition that winds up with free skating tonight.

Last year's Canadian junior champion and competing in senior competition for the first time, Miss Nightingale jumped from eighth to sixth place in the overall standing with her compulsory skate.

One judge gave the shy youngster a 5.9 score — the first she has ever had — out of the maximum six.

Miss Magnussen, despite missing one of her jumps, held the lead over Cathy Lee Irwin of Toronto. Ruth Hutchinson of Vancouver is third.

Two titles were decided on the second day of the week-long competition.

Susan McDonald, 13-year-old from West Vancouver who was in second place after the compulsories, displayed great poise under pressure to edge Julie Bowerman of Woodstock, Ont., and win the novice girls' title. Naomi Taguchi of New Westminster finished third.

And, as expected, the highly-favored Toronto sister-brother combination of Sandra and Val Bezic again proved to be the best pairs skaters. They beat out North Vancouver's Marian Murray and Glenn Moore despite a hip injury suffered by Sandra when she fell during an afternoon practice session

Defending dance champions Louise and Barry Soper of Vancouver took command after their compulsory program. Victoria's Joan Nuttal and Kevin Cottam were in fourth place.

Bryce Swetnam, a professional dance teacher, was impressed with the Victoria combination. He said: "For a new couple, they show a tremendous amount of poise and look better each time out. They have excellent flow."

Cottam skated last year with Linda Roe, another former Victoria skater now living in the Toronto area. Miss Roe and her new partner, Mike Bradley, were placed third, just ahead of the Victoria team.

Debra Robertson and Greg Ladret, who beat out Miss Nuttall and Cottam for the B.C. title, were eighth and last in the senior event but held the lead in the junior competition.

Toller Cranston, the defending champion, took the lead in the men's singles. Cranston, rated the world's best free skater, held a commanding lead over Ron Shaver of Galt, Ont., who, somewhat surprisingly, moved into second ahead of Lee Armstrong and Paul Bonefant.

Bill Marchyshyn of Edmonton, who has trained in Victoria for the past two seasons, was fifth and B.C. champion Patrick McKilligan was sixth.

Most disappointed in the men's division was Victoria's Paul Fisher. A former Canadain junior champion, Fisher finished 11th and last after the compulsory figures.

TOP EGG-DROPPER NOT A CHICKEN

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Shalom Zivelin won a competition this week for University of Southern California engineering students by dropping egg out of a fifth story window onto concrete without the egg breaking.

The annual competition requires the students to come up with some simple device that will keep an egg from breaking when it hits the concrete. The 25 entries used parachutes, springs, impact absorbing materials and one student encased his egg in a thick layer of jello.

Many of the entries did not break, but Zivelin, from Israel, was declared the winner because his device was the simplest and least expensive. He encased the egg in six plastic foam cups, nestled into each other, which absorbed the shock by telescoping on impact.

Basque Rebels Hold Wealthy Spaniard

PAMPLONA, Spain (Reuter) — Basque separatist gunmen were holding one of Spain's richest industrialists in a secret hideout for the second day today after obtaining their first ransom demand.

The militant gunmen of the outlawed Basque separatist organization ETA seized Felipe Huarte, 45, whose family controls a business empire, from his villa late Tuesday night.

The ETA command, which seeks to establish a Basque free state in northern Spain, demanded reinstatement of 114 workers dismissed for staging illegal strikes from a factory owned by Huarte, and pay increases and other fringe benefits.

The dismissed workers are due to report for the morning shift today after accepting a management offer to take them back on the payroll, factory sources said.

The ETA has set a deadline for all demands to be met by Friday night, but they have given no indication what would happen to Huarte if management failed to do so.

Early Start For Canadian Hunters

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) — Canadians will get a head start in the Ontario hunting season, Premier William Davis said Tuesday.

He told a Rotary Club luncheon here that "the ministry of natural resources will provide Canadian residents with an advanced hunting period of one week."

The move is to pacify hunters throughout the north because of what Davis termed "growing concern . . . over hunters from outside the province arriving before the opening day of the hunting season and setting up spots in prime locations before local citizens are able to get there."

Pope 'Alone' in a Godless Society

VATICAN CITY — Pope Paul said Wednesday he feels "immensely alone" at times in the face of godless society.

Describing himself as a "witness who shouts in the desert," the Pope told a crowd of several thousand in his weekly public audience:

"Think an instant together with us about this fact which seems to qualify the history and civilization of our time: the absence of God."

He said the "intentional and radical negation of the very name of God," is exemplified by a "certain country" where a law forbids that the name of God may begin with a capital letter.

The Pope did not name the country. Vatican sources said it is the Soviet Union.

ADDIS ABABA — French president Georges Pompidou and Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia held formal talks today, after the French leader laid a wreath of roses at the base of the Ethiopian empire's victory monument in May 27 Square. It commemorates Selassie's triumphal return to his capital in 1941 after the defeat of the Italian army which had occupied the country five years earlier.

TEL AVIV — Premier Golda Meir returned to Israel today after a six-day journey which took her to Paris, Rome and Geneva.

"After six days of such productivity, I really deserve a prize," the 74-year-old Mrs. Meir said as she stepped from the plane at Lod Airport.

In Paris, Mrs. Meir attended a meeting of socialist leaders. In Rome, she had an audience with Pope Paul and met with Italian government leaders. In Geneva, she conferred with President Houphouet-Boigny of the Ivory Coast.

NEW YORK — Professor Leon Edel, the Canadian-educated literary scholar and biographer, has been appointed editor of the diaries and journals of the late Edmund Wilson, the critic. Edel, named in Wilson's will as the man for the job, won a Pulitzer Prize and a national Book Award in 1963 for his biography of Henry James, the novelist.

AMSTERDAM — Princess Christina, 25, Queen Juliana's fourth and only unmarried daughter, introduced a Canadian friend to her parents at Soestdijk Palace during the Christmas holidays, the newspaper De Telegraff said.

The popular newspaper identified him as Emile Bourree, 23, a French Canadian studying music at the Vincent D'Indy Institute in the Montreal suburb of Outremont.

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — A federal judge Wednesday severed the trial of reputed underworld financial wizard Meyer Lansky from those of four other defendants on charges of skimming casino profits to dodge taxes. Since Lansky's return to the United States after he was denied continued refuge in Israel, he has been in Miami, ill with a heart ailment.

He underwent the surgery Wednesday afternoon. The country music figure, who plays banjo, fiddle and guitar on the stage, was hospitalized here two weeks ago complaining of chest pains.

$22.5 Million Hospital Vote First Priority

Esquimalt Mayor Art Young, re-elected chairman of the Capital Regional Hospital Board Wednesday, has set a $22.5 million hospital building referendum as the first priority this year.

The board received a letter from Health Minister Dennis Cocke confirming his support for the vote. Cocke, however, questions whether or not it is actually an acute-care referendum.

"I feel that it should be called a hospital referendum," he said, "because it isn't only acute-care facilities that are necessary in this regional hospital district."

Young ranked as second the selection of a director for hospital planning, which the regional board approved hiring last month.

Third is resolution of plans to build an extended-care hospital in the western sector of the capital region.

The referendum represents a problem in timing because plans have to be completed and the program presented to the public within about 10 weeks. The vote is scheduled for late March.

Young said he hopes interviewing of candidates for the hospital planning director's job can begin next month and the appointment can be made in March.

The job is being advertised across Canada and offers a salary in the range of $22,000. So far nearly 20 applications have been received.

Development of the western hospital is an issue which could split regional directors on rural-urban lines. The board has approved in principle buying a 35-acre site on Helmcken Road for a 225-bed extended-care hospital.

But Young told the regional board Wednesday that the B.C. Hospital Insurance Service, the provincial government agency which administers hospitals, is reviewing that plan.

He said he gets the impression BCHIS considers the proposal too large an allocation of beds to that area.

Teacher Takes Blame For Fire

Fire broke out at Colquitz junior high school this morning after a teacher brought a lighted propane heater into a room containing two fibreglass canoe moulds.

No one was injured and the fire was contained in the industrial arts room. Only one of the boat molds was destroyed but choking black smoke damaged the room and adjacent halls. A preliminary estimate of damage was $2,500.

"I guess it's my fault," said Archibald van Bursick, industrial arts teacher at the school, as he surveyed the damage.

He said he brought the heater, which he thought was extinguished, and the two moulds indoors about 8:15 a.m. Fire broke out about 20 minutes later.

"It was just pure carelessness," he told Saanich police.

Fire Chief Harold Gaines said at the fire scene that propane should never be used where highly flammable vapors such as those from fibreglassing are present.

Several hundred students, back at the junior high for the first time this week because of a strike of janitors and maintenance workers, filed from school to watch the firemen at work.

BACK TO SCHOOL, but not for long. That was the story at Colquitz junior secondary school this morning as a fire in an industrial arts room emptied the building. Firemen "went in white and came out black," said one officer as the blaze generated sooty dark smoke. Students, who have already missed three days of school this week because of a janitors' strike, were obviously not brokenhearted to suffer yet another interruption. They formed a cavorting audience on the playing field as firemen went to work.

School District Denies Parent Help List Charge

Victoria Times
SECOND SECTION

Greater Victoria School District denied today it is compiling a list of parents willing to do striking janitors' work.

The accusation was made Wednesday night by Bob Cunningham, first vice-president of Local 382 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, representing 268 janitors and maintenance staff on strike since last Friday.

Cunningham claimed names are being taken of volunteer parents and being given to school principals.

A. J. Longmore, school district superintendent, said telephone callers volunteering their services are being told the school district cannot make any recommendations. No names are being taken or given to principals.

School district community relations officer Bill Stavdal said it is the board's policy that it was an individual matter between principals and parents.

But S. J. Willis junior high school principal H. R. Dawson said today he "definitely disputes" Stavdal's statement.

"It is up to the board and the union and the community. It is not up to principals, the opening and closing of buildings and the actual mechanics for cleaning buildings," he said.

Cunningham, speaking at Victoria Labor Council, also charged that a front-page photograph in Wednesday's Daily Colonist was a "set up." He said the photographer emptied a wastebasket on the floor, and had volunteer parent Malcolm Anderson pose sweeping it up.

But today, the photographer, Ian McKain, said "I didn't touch a thing out there. I didn't empty a wastebasket."

Cunningham said teachers at Frank Hobbs elementary school, where Anderson and some other parents have done some cleaning, were "outraged" that this school should be singled out and were considering signing a petition of protest.

In another matter, Cunningham said the school board was wrong in newspaper advertisements this week which said the district proposed no change in the rated floor area to be cleaned by janitors.

In fact, said Cunningham, the district proposed in negotiations that the clause in contract referring to rated floor area be deleted.

'Manipulation' Deplored

"I don't know if they were lying to us; but I have an idea they were lying to the general public," he said.

School district personnel officer Dave Coton was unavailable for comment this morning, but on a radio open-line show Wednesday he admitted that district negotiators proposed deletion of the square footage clause.

The four Greater Victoria mayors, meanwhile, announced their support Wednesday for the school board.

Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen, Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis, Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford and Esquimalt Mayor Art Young said they will ask their councils to take a similar stand.

Their statement supported collective bargaining and adequate wages for government employees but deplored the "manipulation of innocent third parties" and "excessive demands which appear to be the order of the day but are totally unrelated to the cost of living or the ability of the property owners to pay."

The mayors resolved that their councils request that the minister of labor "conduct an inquiry into the dispute with a view to reopening schools immediately and arriving at a settlement which is fair to the employees and equitable to the taxpayers."

The mayors' statement brought a sharp reply from Ray Mercer, assistant western regional director of the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

He said their statement is an "unwarranted intrusion into collective bargaining and into negotiations they are not a party to." He also accused the four mayors of conspiring to impose unrealistically low wage settlements on school district and municipalities on southern Vancouver Island.

He accused Curtis of having the "audacity to suggest CUPE is using Local 382 to set a pattern in the local area. The only ones conspiring to impose an unrealistic wage settlement not only on school board employees but on others throughout the Lower Island, are the mayors, who have met one with the other."

The labor council accused the school board of "arbitrary rule by management" and of "trying to take away previously-won gains" and delegates voted full support for the striking union and urged all union members in Victoria to "show tangible support by joining picket lines."

Pickets Hold Back

Office Staffs Want Some Pay

Striking maintenance workers held off picketing Greater Victoria School District offices today to let clerical workers in a sister local go to work.

"They want to earn some money," Canadian Union of Public Employees staff representative Alex Markides said, explaining the removal of pickets.

"One good way of allowing them to earn some money is to let them go to work once in a while," he said.

Clerical workers in CUPE Local 947 have agreed to respect the picket lines of striking Local 382, whose 268 members went on strike Friday afternoon.

In return, the strikers have agreed to let the clerical workers go to work from time to time.

Wednesday, when a picket line was formed at the school board offices about 10:45 a.m., clerical workers were already inside the building. When the pickets appeared the workers, on instruction from their union leaders, went home for the rest of the day.

Markides said today those pickets were an "unfortunate mistake", and said the incident won't be repeated.

Despite the strike, school arrangements have now been made for almost all the 30,878 students in the district to attend school for certain periods of time, at least to get work assignments.

Nine junior secondary schools, closed for students since Monday, opened for the first time at 9 a.m. today.

Principals in each junior high have set up their own schedules for attendance, depending in part on whether the school has any heat or not.

Most will be open for an hour or two each morning, or three times a week, so students can pick up assignments. Central Junior Secondary School, however, plans to open every day from 9 a.m. to noon and 1 to 3 p.m.

Four junior highs — Highrock, Oak Bay, Central and Shoreline — reported exceptionally high attendance this morning.

Two, Colquitz and S. J. Willis, reported below-normal attendance. Colquitz had about 80 per cent attendance, compared with a normal 93 per cent of its 990 students, principal J. M. Drummond said.

S. J. Willis principal H. R. Dawson said 140 of 850 students were absent today, or attendance of 84 per cent. Normal attendance at this time of year is 90 per cent, but Dawson called the attendance "quite good considering the fact that attendance is never perfect".

Arrangements were made this morning for 500 Grade 10 students who normally attend Victoria Senior Secondary School, Esquimalt Senior Secondary, Mount Douglas Senior Secondary and Mount View Senior Secondary.

These Grade 10s will be able to get books at their own schools between 8:30 and 9:30 a.m. Friday and Monday, school board director of instruction Dr. John Wiens said today.

Provincial examinations which start next Tuesday for many students in Grade 11 and 12 will be held at Victoria Senior Secondary, Wiens said. Students will receive instructions about what rooms and times they will have at the school.

All senior secondary students not required to write exams will be dismissed from school next week from Monday through Friday.

NEW CHAIRMAN of the Capital Regional District board is Jim Campbell, director from the Outer Gulf Islands. He defeated Esquimalt Mayor Art Young at Wednesday's inaugural meeting to succeed Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis, who did not seek re-election. Young was later elected chairman of the regional hospital board. Campbell has been one of the most outspoken critics of the board, especially about planning matters, since his election as director a year ago. A former president of the B.C. School Trustees Association, he is a sheep farmer on Saturna Island.

44-Acre Goal Set For Parkland Plan

A 10-year park-buying program, prepared by Victoria parks administrator Cliff Bate, recommends purchase of 44.39 acres of parkland by 1982.

Bate told the city's parks and recreation committee today that "many, many, many" hours of work had gone into the making of an inventory of the city's 434 acres of parkland and the 10-year parkland acquisition program.

The inventory shows that Victoria has less than the normally accepted ratio of recreational space to people, with 7.1 acres per 1,000 residents against the norm of 10 acres per 1,000.

Bate recommends that Victoria continues to participate in large park acreage purchases through the regional park authority.

Victoria, itself, should increase the minimal size of its neighborhood parks and playgrounds, acquire space for waterfront park development and purchase playlot and playground sites in the areas of Fairfield, Rockland, Fernwood, Beacon Hill, James Bay and Burnside.

Finance Committee Split On Hospital Tax Ruling

A city council finance committee was divided this morning on whether to upset a city council decision last year which enforced taxation on two city lots owned by Victoria General Hospital and used for parking.

Committee chairman Ald. Tom Christie said he couldn't understand why the lots which hold 158 employees' cars on Fairfield had not been exempted from taxation.

"This should be rectified. We're not taxing Royal Jubilee (hospital). One hospital's getting off the hook."

Hospital acting director John Murray said the hospital had 15,500 admissions in 1972, 25,000 emergency visits, engaged 300 doctors and employed 1,000 staff.

He said the hospital had 248 parking spaces in all, 90 of them next to the buildings, for patient and visitor traffic, 158 of them across the street on the two lots in question.

The hospital wants to get out of paying approximately $700 in annual taxes on the employee parking.

But Ald. Percy Frampton said that $470 made by the hospital each month from employee parking charges was sufficient to pay the taxes.

Ald. Bill Tindall said the entire situation of non-profit bodies and the status of their parking areas should be studied.

The committee agreed to discuss the matter further once Ald. Alf Hood submitted a report on the situation.

Ask the Times

Q. Where can I write to inquire about names and locations of schools for training and caring for horses, riding instruction, etc. By this I mean live-in, where you pay a fee. They can be either in the U.S. or Canada. Also, the names and locations of some harness-saddlemakers.—K.B.

A. There is no such school yet in Canada. Nearest one is the Pacific Horse Centre, P.O. Box L, Elk Grove, Calif. 95624.

The yellow pages list four local harness and saddlery shops.

Q. When were the liquor stores in Victoria open until 1 a.m., and all night? J.O.C.

A. The Liquor Control Board has no records on this, but as far as anyone can remember liquor stores were never open until 1 a.m. or all night in Victoria. Vancouver had all-night liquor stores before the Second World War, but not since.

NEVER ON SUNDAY!

There will be a six-hour free rock 'n roll concert at Beacon Hill Park this summer, but it won't be on a Sunday.

Promoter Dave Ringland told Victoria's parks and recreation committee: "We do not intend using massive amplification systems."

"I intend on conducting the concert with restrained volume for the benefit of those living near the park," Ringland wrote in seeking permission to hold the show on Sunday, Aug. 12 at the Beacon Hill band shell.

But Ald. Tom Christie wasn't impressed. He told fellow committee members today the show should take place at Mount Douglas park, and not on a Sunday.

Committee chairman Ald. Ove Witt told Christie: "You don't have to go to the park on this particular Sunday if you don't want to."

"But six hours of it," groaned Christie.

"So what, you can sit and play bridge for six hours and that would drive me wacky," commented parks administrator Cliff Bate.

The committee agreed to ask Ringland to submit another date for consideration.

Love and Kisses for Wallace in Oak Bay

By BRIAN BUTTERS
Times Staff

They called it the first annual general meeting of the Oak Bay Progressive Conservative Association.

They might as well have called it the first annual Oak Bay love-in.

That is the only proper name to attach to the proceedings Wednesday night at the Windsor Park pavilion. One hundred and sixty of Scott Wallace's best friends showed up.

(See also Pages 3 and 6.)

In fact, it was the first-ever general meeting of the constituency association to be held in Oak Bay following the 1972 province-wide revival of the party through the efforts of provincial leader Derril Warren.

And it can be accurately said that one of the primary reasons for that many people showing up at the meeting was the recent publicity given to an alleged "rift" in the ranks of the party, with MLA Wallace cast in the role of wedge.

The meeting went out of its way — not once, but twice — to establish that it was solidly behind their man Scott as MLA. The first occasion was a standing ovation for his efforts as MLA. The second was a motion passed unanimously that the meeting was going on record as being in favor of "Conservative unanimity."

Nowhere was there a sign of the supposed split in the ranks. There were no tomatoes thrown, no Bronx cheers, not a single heckler. The biggest single problem was the fact that about 40 people had to stand up for two hours because there weren't enough chairs.

It was an appreciative audience which sat — or stood — through the evening of speeches, hat-passing and elections.

There was Warren to hear first. The provincial leader spoke of the gains the party had made in the last year, of his intention to try again to win a seat in the legislature — heavy applause — and of the Tory plans in the upcoming session of the house.

They heard Wallace warn of the dangers of state socialism and the advantages of the profit factor in provincial economics. They heard Hugh Curtis, Tory MLA for Saanich-and-the-Islands, say what a great guy Scott is and how hard he has worked for the party. And they heard themselves applauding every speech and every resolution.

There was business to take care of as well. Money does not grow on trees, Wallace told them; with $161.30 in the bank, they will never be stuck with the label of richest constituency association in the province.

There were officers to be elected for the coming year. And they were elected: president—Fraser McColl; first vice-president—Oak Bay Ald. Norman Pimlott; second vice-president—Elizabeth McKay; secretary—Leah Brown; treasurer—Iris Read; directors—Len Dawes, Barbara Horne, Ann Patterson, Graham Thomson and John McVie.

There was an outgoing president, Mark Preston, to thank for his efforts. He was thanked, even given a standing ovation. It was that kind of night.

The feeling one got was that each one of the 160 present wanted to tell Greater Victoria: "We Tories are still together, no matter what you read in the newspapers."

Greater Victoria, consider yourself told!

A League for Cats And Dogs and Mice

By NICOLE STRICKLAND

Irene Woods will do almost anything to save a cat in distress. So will the other members of the Cat's Protection League, a society founded to assist cats and their owners in Victoria for the past 20 years.

"We started working to help cats in 1952," says Mrs. Woods, "basing our activities on the work of the Cat's Protection League of England. When we first started out, we had a saucer on the table and everybody put in nickels and cents for postage. We were just an advisory committee then, issuing free pamphlets."

The pamphlets, updated and checked for accuracy by a veterinarian, concern the care and feeding of cats, and are distributed free to any person calling the League.

Pay Fees

"We give free advice, and we assist with spaying fees for people who couldn't otherwise afford to have their animal neutered. Some people just can't afford to take their cat to a veterinarian and when there is real financial need, we'll help. They repay us in instalments, when they can afford it."

The Victoria Cat's Protection League is designed to help the needy, welfare cases, and pensioners, but Mrs. Woods admits that: "Some people do try to take advantage of us, but you'd be surprised — it's always the poor people who pay us right back. I think it's wrong to give even people on the lowest incomes something for nothing, and they usually want to repay us anyway."

If the problem is serious, and the pet owner is hesitant to call a veterinarian, the League will do so for him, and even pay for the cost of the examination if necessary.

And the assistance is not just restricted to cats.

Education

"I think the dogs in need are just as numerous as the cats. Back in the 1950s, we seemed to find more cats strayed or sick or dying than dogs, and we decided to specialize in cats. But we will help any animal, whether it be a dog or a horse or a mouse."

What the League promotes most is spaying and neutering, to control the animal population problem. Another facet of League work is public educatiion to the welfare of the animal.

"It's terribly important to educate people to feed their cats properly, because poor feeding can result in disease. There's one butcher store in town that sells pet food at 20 cents a pound, and it's real meat. There's more in one pound of real meat than there is in six tins of cheap cat food."

SNORT-A-DAY KEEPS FLU AWAY

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Cognac Producers of France distributed their own brand of flu vaccine — an ounce of cognac mixed with three ounces of orange juice, on the rocks — free to tenants of their building on Madison Avenue.

Some 1,000 office workers in the mid-Manhattan office building responded to the invitation, which cited "amazingly good results" from the "flu-driver" during the Hong Kong flu epidemic four years ago.

"Absenteeism caused by the flu was held to a minimum," claimed the invitation. The producers asked their fellow tenants "to enjoy a drink of cognac and orange juice in the interests of good health."

Children need change in focus every few minutes

Classes Develop Their Muscles

For about an hour every second day, Mrs. Valerie Lewis changes her attention span to fit that of a child's.

She teaches creative dance to some 15 youngsters and, even when the subject matter is rhythm and movement, she finds the children need a change in focus every few minutes.

"We work around a different scene evehy week," said Mrs. Lewis.

"The children (who range in age from 3 to 5) practise moving quickly as opposed to slowly, lightly and then heavily, and base some of their dance patterns on visual objects."

Mrs. Lewis, who trained at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts in England, says parents who enrol their children in the course, offered by the Saanich indoor recreation program, want their youngsters to get the feeling of rhythm and movement.

"Most (parents) I think are pretty keen that their kids get involved when they are small. They want their children to establish movement and coordination," Mrs. Lewis said.

There are now two classes in pre-school creative dance being offered at Gordon Head Recreation Centre, and two others—one for women, the other for children 6 to 8 years—will start soon.

Other class subjects offered at the centre include handicrafts, puppetry and puppet theatre, starting next week. For information please contact Mrs. Marie Bradshaw, program co-ordinator, at 477-1871.

Pets Not Welcome

DEAR ABBY: I would like to know how to handle the problem of guests who bring their unwelcome pets when they visit.

My sister and her husband have two obnoxious poodles. They are not trained and are a menace to my children and household furnishings.

I once jokingly hinted, "I can tie our children outside if they get on your dogs' nerves." (No reaction.) These dogs have growled and snapped at our children without provocation, and our little ones are terrified of them.

On their last visit, one of the dogs lifted his leg on my collection of African violets and all my sister said was, "Whoops, Curley had an accident!" (It was no accident. It was deliberate.)

I like animals, Abby, and am not cruel to them, but these poodles are more than I can take.

I love my sister and wouldn't want her to discontinue her visits to me entirely, but how can I handle this? — Dog Problem.

DEAR PROBLEM: Quit hinting and joking, and tell your sister you love her, and her visits, but not her dogs! But be sure to place the blame where it belongs. Ill-mannered and untrained pets are a reflection of their ignorant, lazy owners.

DEAR ABBY: My husband's brother is suing his parents! How about that one?

Joe claims his parents owe him $3,000. It seems when Joe was in the service he kept sending home war bonds. Well, after Joe came out of the service the folks gve him money left and right whenever he asked for it, but they had to cash the bonds to do it, so now there are no more bonds left. Joe claims his parents owe him the money And the folks say they don't.

What I want to know is this: Can a guy sue his own parents? — Wondering.

DEAR WONDERING: Anybody can sue whomever he wants to sue. Whether he can win or not is anybody's guess — until after the case is settled.

What Would Happen If Reasoning Power Used

I recently read a magazine article entitled "Play 'Consequences' With Your Child." The author went on to explain that Consequences involves asking your child "What would happen if. . .?", thus urging him to develop his reasoning powers.

Playing Consequences with our children is a bit like giving Michelangelo a paint-by-number set. They have dedicated their entire pre-adolescent lives to determining vital issues such as: What would happen if I dropped jelly beans down the hot air register? If I put caramels in the toaster? If I flushed my rubber duck down the toilet? If I cut off my eyelashes?

The variations are, regrettably, endless.

Of course, the whole trick to playing the game of Consequences lies in keeping everything at a purely theoretical level.

"What would happen if Mommy didn't use a potholder to take the biscuits out of the over?" I asked.

"You'd burn your hand."

That's right!" I beamed. "Then would what happen?"

"You'd say '%$!'"

"How many times have I told you not to say that word?"

"I didn't say it. I said that you'd say it."

Determining to avoid personal issues, I tried the game again the next day. "What would happen if the electricity went off?"

"We wouldn't be able to watch TV or shave or wash dishes or open cans. And my worms would melt."

"What worms?"

"The worms I put in the freezer last summer. I wanted to see what would happen if . . ."

1,883 Visits By VON

Elizabeth Hutchinson, a public health nurse, reported that the Victoria branch of the Victorian Order of Nurses made 1,883 visits in December, 1972 at the branch's monthly meeting in Spencer House.

Miss Hutchinson said that the two part-time physiotherapists feel there is more work than they can manage and the two male nurses were also particularly busy.

It was suggested that the branch employ a full-time physiotherapist in addition to the two working part-time.

Stiff Competition Has Kept Cost Down

Hike in Coffee Prices Soon family

WENDY DEY - EDITOR

By WAYNE HARDING
Times Staff

The price of coffee has held steady — and, in some cases, has fallen by a few cents per pound — since the beginning of the year.

But it won't last. Pressure is on wholesalers and retailers to raise their prices substantially in the next few weeks.

Competition in this low mark-up commodity is the reason prices have not risen recently. Each dealer is uneasily watching for his competitor to be the first to respond to increased prices on the world market.

"It's crazy," says Peter Culus, marketing director of Nabob Foods Ltd., in Vancouver. His firm, like others, is holding its coffee prices steady and absorbing higher costs until the price of competitors shows a rise.

Retailers claim there is little money to be made on coffee. It's an item you have to carry, but stiff competition keeps prices to a minimum.

The price of coffee is one consumers tend to compare more readily than other products. Possibly this is because a household's supply of coffee is seldom used up before a second pound or jar is purchased, as one local retailer suggests. The shoppers' awareness of coffee prices also has acted as a deterrent to the price increase.

"The end result is we're not able to pass (the price increase) on to the consumer," says Robert Gebert, general manager of Dickson Importing Co. "But it will have to happen soon."

Every coffee dealer is affected by the price of coffee beans on the world market, Gebert says.

There are two major reasons for the increase.

One is the breakdown of the International Coffee Agreement (CA) which came when Brazil, Colombia, Angola and the Central American Republics refused to accept the price and quota formula proposed by consumer nations at the recent London conference to plan the 1972-73 marketing season.

The ICA previously kept prices fixed for long enough periods to allow coffee roasters to regulate price fluctuations caused by supply and demand. Now an open market exists and trading in coffee on the commodities futures markets has almost completely ceased.

The second reason for the world price increase is the crop failure which has hit Brazilian coffee plantations where most of the world's coffee is grown.

Frost in July and rain and hail during the winter have destroyed so much of the crop that it is now estimated Brazil will produce only 15.5 million bags of coffee when the May harvest is in, compared to last year's yield of 23.2 million bags. (Each bag containes 132 pounds.)

As a result, coffee roasters have raised their prices. The biggest U.S. manufacturer, General Foods, has increased the price of ground coffee by six cents per pound.

It is estimated the final increase at the manufacturers' level will be as much as 10 cents per pound.

Aiming High, Students Build Own Airplane

ASH FORK, Ariz. (AP) — Last year high-school pupils in this northern Arizona community of 900 built a two-bedroom house and sold it.

This year, they're aiming even higher. They're building an airplane and hope to fly it.

"I'm teaching these kids to survive," says School Supt. Bill Roark. "We want to keep these kids off the welfare rolls and also let them take a look at more of the world than Ash Fork offers them."

The aircraft being constructed under the direction of Lloyd Eash isn't a model. It's a full-size fabric-covered plane complete with two seats and an 80-horsepower engine.

Five junior and senior pupils are working on the plane for class credit. Eash and the Federal Aviation Administration are keeping a close eye on them.

Once the aircraft — which Roark says will cost $2,500 — is built, it won't be sold.

"We'll teach kids to fly the same as we teach them to drive," he said, adding that next year's project calls for building a larger metal-frame airplane.

Peter Bowers of Seattle, Wash., the designer of the aircraft, will be at the controls on the maiden flight, Roark said.

Twenty-four Ash Fork pupils under Roark's direction completed a two-bedroom frame house last year and sold it for $8,000 to a land-development firm. Roak said the actual cost of the home was a $1,750 loan and a lot of donated material.

The profits from the house went to the school program, which this year is financing construction of the airplane.

Foster Parents to Press For 5% Annual Increase

Foster parents need more financial assistance for the maintenance of foster children, members of the Family and Children's Services Foster Parents Association said Wednesday night.

The association will ask Rehabilitation Minister Norman Levi for a five-per-cent annual increase based on the cost of living increases in a brief to be presented in February.

Some 3,500 foster parents in the province receive a monthly maintenance rate of $53.50 to $80 depending on the foster child's age. Clothing costs are financed by an additional $9 to $15 a month.

Spokesman for the association, Mrs. Joan Bednar, a foster parent for eight years, said although some foster parents can afford to put out money for their foster children, "it's harder to make do with the rates for the older foster children."

"We need an annual increase to keep up with the cost of living.

"Maintenance rate increases seem to get away behind, and come few and far between."

The parents voiced their concerns to Social Credit MLA for Victoria Newell Morrison, who was invited to the meeting "to see what foster parents were all about."

"It is lucky you will be dealing with the present government as a good many of them will understand your problem," he said.

Although extra funds are available, the parents said, "whether we get them depends on the social workers and a lot of parents are afraid the children will be taken away if they make demands."

If there weren't foster parents, one woman said, the alternatives for caring for foster children in the province — there are some 9,000 children under care in B.C. — would be much more expensive.

Mrs. Bernice Packford, an FCS supervisor, said, if institutions were opened up to care for the children the cost would be "at the very least, $20 a day."

"We're doing it because we enjoy it, but it's hard when some parents can't make ends meet. Nine dollars for clothing only pays for half a pair of shoes for a teenager," one mother commented.

Trial Goes On Despite Statute Typo

Judge William Ostler ruled Wednesday that a trial of a 19-year-old man, charged with possession of hashish, go ahead in spite of a subsection in the Revised Statutes of Canada 1970 which describes possession of narcotics as an indictable offence.

A person cannot be convicted in a lower court upon summary conviction for an offence which is indictable. The accused has an option to go to a higher court on an indictable matter.

Ostler made the ruling in regard to the trial of Delan Kunitz, 1090 Goldstream. Ostler said the inclusion of the word "indictable" was an error.

"I think it clear," he said, "that on reading the subsection as a whole the inclusion of the word indictable must be either a printer's or draftsman's error."

He pointed out that the French version of the revised statutes on the Narcotics Control Act did not include the word indictable, so did not change the existing legislation it revised.

"Consolidating statutes," he said, "are presumed not to alter existing law.

"Frankly, it's abundantly clear in my mind that Parliament intended that the wording of the section should have been followed in the revised statute. The French version makes the meaning clear."

Earlier, Kunitz's counsel, Dermod Owen-Flood, had contended that the revised statutes "repealed" the original law. He said the statute revision commission had made "a sin of commission — not omission."

Ostler's ruling was in contrast to one made by provincial Judge Arthur Kelly of Surrey Monday. Kelly would not allow a case of marijuana possession to go ahead until he had clarification of what he termed "sloppy legislation."

City policeman Blake Green and Cpl. Douglas Payne, RCMP, both described seeing Kunitz with two other males sitting on a bench in Bastion Square Sept. 28.

They described how they had seen Kunitz smoking something in a soapstone pipe, which he passed on to one of his friends.

Green described how, on searching Kunitz, he had found another similar pipe in a back pocket of the man's pants and a matchbox containing "a brown substance" in a pocket of his shirt.

Green said he had sent the two pipes and the matchpox's contents to Vancouver for analysis and showed certificates, stating that the substance was hashish.

Saanich policeman Denis Lush testified he was the one who served the papers on Kunitz at 1090 Goldstream on Jan. 12.

Both Green and Payne testified that Kunitz had admitted smoking "hash" when arrested in Bastion Square.

Owen-Flood, producing no witnesses, contended that the Crown had not presented a strong enough case.

He said no statements purported to have been made by Kunitz could be allowed because there had been no voir dire (trial within a trial) to allow these as evidence.

He said the officer serving the certificates on Kunitz had not identified Kunitz in court.

He said Green had failed to prove that the sealed envelopes containing the pipes and hashish had not been tampered with before they reached the analyst.

He contended that the Crown's charge was "possession of cannabia resin (hashish)" while under the Narcotics Control Act cannabia resin was listed as a narcotic but not canabis resin (hashish).

Decision was reserved to Jan. 25.

MD Suspended for Fraud

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto doctor has lost his licence to practise medicine for six months for billing the Ontario Health Insurance Plan for treatment he did not perform, the Ontario College of Physicians and Surgeons announced Wednesday.

The college said Dr. Albert R. Deep, a specialist in internal medicine, submitted bills "for payment of office visits in the cases of four patients, when in fact no such visits had been made on the date mentioned in the accounting."

In addition, the college said, Dr. Deep provided care that was not needed by a patient "to the doctor's financial advantage."

"He billed the Ontario Health Insurance Plan for services to three patients he had not in fact performed."

Dr. Deep declined to say if he will appeal the ruling of the college, the self-disciplinary body of the medical profession.

He said the report was confidential and it gave only one aspect of the case.

The college also found Dr. Thomas Grimason of Gananoque guilty of professional misconduct after he was convicted of impaired driving and being drunk in a public place.

However the college said since he was obtaining medical treatment, the penalty would be limited to a reprimand and paying the costs of the hearing.

In a third case announced by the college, an unidentified doctor was found incompetent to practise medicine because of mental illness.

Freeze Clamped on Kingsview

Duncan Bureau, Phone 746-6181

NORTH COWICHAN — All work on the controversial Kingsview housing development on Mount Tzouhalem has been halted by North Cowichan council.

Council Wednesday afternoon slapped a temporary freeze on the project until a land-use contract between the municipality and Kingsview Properties Ltd. is signed.

This decision was made after Ald. Tom Burge reported the company has already started clearing and removing trees.

"It was my understanding that until such time as the land-use contract has been signed no work could take place", Burge said. "But now clearing is being done and some trees are being removed. I must admit I am somewhat disturbed about it."

Ald. Ron McKinnon said he had been advised by B.C. Forest Service officials that the logging at the site is not a regular logging operation but it was assumed that trees are being removed for land-clearing purposes in connection with the housing development.

Kingsview properties plans to construct 1,500 housing units over the next 10 years. In early December, council approved in principle a land-use contract with the company to allow the project to be built under stringent controls.

Acting Mayor Dennis Hogan said he is disturbed that "the company proceeded with the project so hastily. This does not show much good will", he said. "We don't want high pressure from developers in the area. If we think it is good for the municipality, we go along, but we don't want a hasty development that irritates people."

Ald. Margaret Robertson pointed out that under a land-use contract the municipality would designate trees that should be cut.

Ald. Archie Stevenson expressed concern over the company not submitting any detailed plans of the project to council.

Residents along Maple Bay Road, where the development will take place, are opposing the project. They have said they will take legal action if possible to stop the development because they fear it will increase their taxes, destroy the rural character of the entire area, pose ecological problems and play havoc with the rural road traffic.

A meeting to discuss legal advice will be held at 8 tonight at the Maple Bay Elementary School.

Highrise Rim Feared

COWICHAN BAY — Residents here fear that if one apartment building is allowed the whole of the bay may become rimmed with highrises.

This was the main issue at the Cowichan Valley Regional Board's land-use contract hearing at Cowichan Bay Wednesday evening to discuss an application by Cowichan Bay Inn Company Ltd. to build a $540,000 41-unit three-storey apartment building.

Don Hepburn, president and general manager of the company, told more than 50 people the building would be located so that it would take advantage of the view of Cowichan Bay without interferring with anyone else's view.

He said that all water for the apartment would come from a well on the property. Although the project, which will be located between Wilmot and Pritchard Roads near the Cowichan Bay Inn, is within the Cowichan Bay water works system area, Hepburn said his company cannot afford to pay the $20,500 the waters works board said would be required to connect to the water supply.

Plans call for underground parking as well as other parking facilities. Hepburn said the apartment would have 25 one-bedroom units, 15 two-bedroom units and one bachelor suite.

Other areas that worry residents are: possible increase in taxes, a change in land values, overcrowding of Bench School classrooms from an increase of population and increased traffic.

Chairman of the hearing, alternate director Jev Tothill, said that he, along with Mill Bay director Ralph Kier and Cobble Hill director Murray Turner, will take the points made by residents to the regional board for its consideration.

'Misunderstanding'—Manager

KENNEDY
. . . "working closely

COBBLE HILL — There is a big misunderstanding over the clearing of land at the proposed large-scale housing project on Mount Tzouhalem, Bob Kennedy, project manager for Kingsview Properties Ltd., said today.

"We cannot sign a land-use contract with North Cowichan until we get engineers' studies and designs completed so that we can give a detailed plan to council," he said. "We cannot carry out the studies until some roads are opened."

Kennedy said his company clearly understands that it cannot start with the actual housing development until it signs the contract with North Cowichan.

Council Wednesday slapped a temporary freeze on the project.

Kennedy said that, because the roads have had to be opened up, it has held up progress with the plans.

"There must be some misunderstanding on council because we have been working very closely with their engineer and planner. They know what we are doing," he said. "We are not doing anything that hasn't been agreed upon with the municipality."

He also feels it is very important to open all roads in the project before May and fire season because of the high fire hazard with the development being on a hill.

"We want to open all roads for fire break purposes. Not only for our protection but for other people in the area," he said.

Kennedy said that 16 people are working at the site.

"It is a good winter works project because all of the workers but one is local. We had to get an engineer from out of town."

More local workers and contractors will be hired as the project proceeds, he said.

Kennedy said that, although he has not received official notification from council on the temporary freeze, that all work would be stopped until he gets further instructions from Vancouver.

"It will cost us money to stop now but we want to work as closely as possible with North Cowichan. We want to clear up any misunderstandings."

Kennedy noted that the company is not legally bound to stop and that it could desecrate the whole 505 acres if it wished until the land-use contract is signed.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

A Substitute for Failing Kidneys

Anyone who has serious disease of the kidneys or is concerned about a loved one with kidney disease, would do well to get a copy of the "Herrick Hospitaler,." a little journal from the Herrick Memorial Hospital in Berkeley, Calif. 94704.

In an issue of the little journal, there is much about dialysis, the method whereby the poisonous chemicals which are constantly being thrown out into the urine, are taken out of the blood with the help of a machine, when the kidneys fail to do this work properly. If these chemicals are not removed, the person will eventually die.

I read in the booklet that there are many birth defects in the urinary tract — defects that can lead to serious kidney damage. There may be failures of development, or tumors, or kidney stones. Also, there may be obstruction in the proper flow of blood to the kidneys.

Some of the troubles are acute, some are chronic, and a few are due to damage by an overdose of some drug. Often the abnormality can be recognized by testing the blood for a number of chemicals, or examining the urine with a microscope. They may be some nausea, vomiting, restless legs at night and burning of the skin. The person may have loss of appetite, or many bruise easily or bleed easily. There may come increased pigmentation of the skin, shortness of breath, swelling of the face or the feet or the abdomen, pain in the low back or the ribs, headaches, unexplained fever, or a constant feeling of fatigue.

Within the kidneys are some 2,000,000 microscopic filters that remove from the blood the urea and other refuse-like material that blood contains. These useless and harmful chemicals must be thrown out of the body in the urine. If the kidneys don't work well, some of the harmful material is left to pile up in the body.

Every hour in a normal person, more than 18 gallons of blood pass through the kidneys, where, as I have said, the blood is cleaned as it passes through the tiny filters, and then fluid goes through many yards of tiny tubules which return much of the water into the blood. If this mechanism does not work well, the person may have to urinate every hour or so.

Farm-Freeze Payments Urged

OSOYOOS (CP) — Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich said Wednesday that some farmers should be given compensation amounting to the difference between what their land is worth as farmland and what the farmers could get if they sold it for subdivision.

He said he will recommend to the cabinet next week that B.C. farmers receive adequate compensation for land sale opportunities denied them under the government's pending farmland-freeze legislation.

"Personally I feel that people who have resisted and saved our good farmland should be compensated," he said after angry fruit growers had criticized the government for more than three hours at the annual B.C. Fruit Growers meeting here.

The orchardists said the government's order-in-council farmland freeze is dictatorial and they are worried that legislation might well allow confiscation of private land and denial of individual land without recourse to the courts.

Several growers charged the government with going back on its election pledge to consult with the public before proposing major legislation.

Pat Jordan, former Socred minister without portfolio and MLA for North Okanagan said she feared the NDP government was developing a policy of taking over private land. She was critical of the former Social Credit government for not moving to protect farmland from subdivisions.

Mrs. Jordan said it was difficult to criticize the legislation without knowing what it entails exactly. She promised the Socred opposition would watch the situation closely.

Alan Claridge, president of the 2,800 member B.C. Fruit Growers Association, said the government would bankrupt itself if it tried to pay each farmer a cash settlement for the profit lost in the farmland freeze.

Stupich told the growers the B.C. Federation of Agriculture had been urging the government to halt for 12 years and now that something is being done the farmers seem more concerned with the lost profits from subdivision than with keeping their land.

The minister said he agrees with some of the growers that it is unrealistic for all farmers to expect a cash compensation from the pending legislation because not all farmland is suitable for subdivision.

Stupich said the long-term aim of the government is to farming and increase the farmers' returns so that it is more profitable to farm than to sell for subdivision.

Intimidation Charge Valid

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Charges of intimidation against four Pinantan Lake residents — Robert Hunt, his wife Eva, Marlene Paquette, and Mary Anne Madeau — were ruled valid by Provincial Court Judge Stuart Van Male Wednesday and the case was adjourned to Feb. 7.

Judge Van Male ruled the first information sworn by Staff Sgt. Len Brown of the Kamloops District RCMP on Oct. 11 disclosed no offence on the part of the accused, but on the basis of the evidence presented to the court he held the information could be amended and resworn.

He said there was a surplus of words in the original information which in effect disclosed that no offence had occurred.

Bob Gray, crown counsel in the proceedings, presented an amendment to the court charging the defendants did wrongfully and unlawfully block a highway for the purposed of compelling Geoffrey Bodman to abstain from his lawful duty as a bus driyr.

The charges arose during an incident when some parents of Pinantan Lake students charged that Bodman, the school bus driver on that route, had been driving recklessly while busing students to Kamlooops. The parents said Bodman had been followed and clocked at speeds of 70 to 72 miles an hour.

Another group of residents at Pinantan Lake supported Bodman, saying the charges against him were ridiculous.

Three of the defendants were arrested after the second day of a two-day episode that saw mothers picketing the bus as it made its regular run from Pinantan Lake to Kamloops. The fourth defendant, Robert Hunt, was arrested later.

Guilty Pleas Given In Child Abuse Case

COQUITLAM (CP) — A pre-sentence report was ordered Wednesday for Mr. and Mrs. David Gary Olund of Coquitlam, who both pleaded guilty to ill-treatment of a five-year-old foster child in their care.

They admitted in court that the child was getting on Olund's nerves.

The charge was laid under the child protection act after the boy was admitted to hospital last summer in Kitimat with bruises and parts of his body swollen.

Court was told a doctor in Kitimat said the child had been immersed in cold water, had been beaten with a wooden spoon, and had been forced to run up and down a hall until he was exhausted.

Mrs. Olund told Provincial Court Judge F. C. Giles, "I love the children. I know he was getting on my husband's nerves. I never beat him or put him in cold water, but I was a witness."

"We don't understand," said Olund. "Why was my wife charged?"

Drug Pusher Given Penitentiary Term

NANAIMO (CP) — Steven Kennedy Berrow, 19, of Nanaimo, has been sentenced to four years in the B.C. Penitentiary in New Westminister for selling heroin, despite a plea from his lawyer for sentence to a provincial prison.

Defence counsel Alan Filmer has said heroin is almost as easy to obtain in the federal penitentiary as on the streets of Vancouver and added "there are sexual perversions there and young men suffer more extreme punishment than older men."

Judge Leslie Cashman of county court said he had little choice: "I must send him to a penitentiary."

"He could easily have sold that one cap of heroin to a non-drug addict and in so doing have initiated someone into that habit," the judge said.

April Appeal On Teachers

Two Victoria teachers, fired by the school district last July and reinstated by a board of reference ruling in October will have their case heard again in April when the school board appeals the reinstatement.

School board lawyer Brian Smith says April 18 and 19 have been set aside in Victoria county court for the case of Bona MacMurchie and Evelyn Ball who were dismissed on grounds of misconduct and neglect of duty.

It is expected to be the first appeal of a board of reference decision since the board method of dealing with dismissed teachers was established last spring.

The two teachers have not been working pending hearing of the appeal.

Astronomer To Discuss Copernicus

The 500th anniversary of the birth of Copernicus this year will be marked by a public lecture by Polish astronomer Dr. Wilhelmina Iwanowska in Newcombe Auditorium, Provincial Museum, Tuesday at 8:15 p.m.

She will talk about the relation of the famous astronomer, who made known the theory that the earth and other planets move around the sun, to modern science.

Dr. Iwanowska, director of the Nicolaus Copernicus Observatory at the University of Torun in Poland, is on a cross-Canada visit. She will give a seminar to members of the University of Victoria physics department Monday.

Condominium Building Said More Profitable

VANCOUVER (CP) — It is more profitable to build apartments to sell, rather than rent, a condominium developer told the Vancouver Real Estate Board Wednesday.

Murray D. Bryce, president of Canadian Projects Ltd., which has built four condominium developments in the Vancouver area, said the federal tax structure has robbed rental apartment building of its profitability.

Bryce said companies that build apartment structures and sell them to investors can expect a profit of about $1,500 a unit. He said the condominium developer's profit is double that, but he must also work as a realty agent.

Pusher Sentenced

BURNABY (CP) — Robert Michael Patrick Grandillo, 22, of no fixed address, was sentenced to three years Wednesday after he pleaded guilty Dec. 15 to selling 23 capsules of heroin to an RCMP undercover agent for $230.

Weekend Jail

BURNABY (CP) — Dennis Gordon Manuel, 18, of Burnaby, will spend the next seven weekends in jail as the result of a 14-day jail sentence Tuesday for causing a disturbance by swearing, escaping custody, assault causing bodily harm, resisting arrest, and breach of probation. He was arrested after a group of youths interfered with a constable arresting a juvenile in the investigation of a broken window Sept. 1.

Vote Tampering?

LILLOOET (CP) — Village council has ordered an investigation into a report disclosed at this week's council meeting that ballots were tampered with in December's unsuccessful arena referendum. The $250,000 referendum was approved by 56 per cent of regional district voters, 4 per cent less than the required 60 per cent.

Safety Award

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. Road Builders' Association has won the road builders' national safety competition for the third consecutive year. The competition is based on statistics for August, when building is at its height, and is sponsored by the Canadian Construction Association. Disabling injuries frequency is compared with the number of man hours worked, and B.C. won with a rate of 9.75 per cent.

Bridge Access

VANCOUVER (CP) — The executive of the Greater Vancouver Regional District Wednesday said public transit should be given priority access to the new bridge the federal government is building to serve Vancouver International Airport. District chairman Mayor Ron Andrews of North Vancouver District said the executive believes modifications to the approaches could accommodate express buses.

Fire Silences CHTK

VANCOUVER (CP) — Radio and television station CHTK resumed operations Wednesday night after a fire caused a halt in service for several hours.

The radio station was back on the air at 11:30 p.m., five hours after the fire, and television operations resumed an hour earlier.

Two CHTK employees were in the two-storey building at the time of the fire but neither was injured.

Ottawa Keeps Paying For Empty Apartments

WINNIPEG (CP) — The department of national defence is continuing to pay about $19,500 a month to rent 148 apartment units at Gimli that have been vacant since the fall of 1971.

Ken McLeod, the department's director-general of quartering, said in an interview the department has had little luck in buying out the 10-year lease or subletting the apartments.

The apartments were built in 1967 to provide accommodation for military personnel at Canadian Forces Base Gimli, about 60 miles north of Winnipeg. The base was closed in September, 1971, and the 900 servicemen and their families moved to other bases.

McLeod said the department now is awaiting word from a group interested in developing the area as a winter recreation site and could use the facilities as a hostel. He said the department had decided against renting out the units because of the serious effect it would have on the local rental market.

Labor Shortage

WINNIPEG (CP) — Jack Smith of Regina, incoming president of the Prairie Roadbuilders Association, says he expects another shortage of labor when roadbuilding season opens this spring.

He told the association's annual meeting that higher wages paid in Alberta and British Columbia have resulted in a labor shortage in Saskatchewan and Manitoba.

Rate Hike Sought

CALGARY (CP) — Calgary Power has applied to the Alberta Public Utilities Board for an immediate interim rate increase.

A spokesman for the company said the interim increase is being sought as a stopgap until the board rules on a permanent increase of 15 per cent. A decision on the permanent increase is expected in late spring or early summer.

Payoff Alleged

BRUNO, Sask. (CP) — The only drug store in this central Saskatchewan town is scheduled to close Jan. 31 because its special liquor licence has been withdrawn.

Lawrence Schulte says Bruno Pharmacy Ltd., which he established in 1953, will have to close because it derived about half its income from liquor sales.

Withdrawal of the licence has divided the town's 825 residents with charges that the move was politically inspired. The licence has been given to Joe Ring, a district farmer, New Democratic Party who one group claims is a worker.

Alta. Pension Hike

EDMONTON (CP) — A 3.5 per cent increase in pensions paid to retired civil servants was announced Tuesday by the Alberta government.

Labor Minister Bert Hohol said it was the first annual adjustment made since 1969.

"The latest increase, effective immediately, places our former employees in a most favorable position in relation to their counterparts elsewhere," he said in a news release.

Retail Sales Boom

SASKATOON (CP) — Retail sales in Saskatchewan in 1972 totalled $1.311 billion, breaking the old record of $1.305 billion set in 1966.

Ross Walker, secretary-manager of the Saskatchewan Retail Merchants Association, said 1972's record was a 10.6 per cent increase over 1971's total of $1.184 billion. Walker attributed the increase to good prices for farm products and an average 11 per cent increase in labor income.

Strike Four Out

EDMONTON (CP) — Strike Four, an agency which found jobs for 120 hardcore unemployables in the city last year, ceased operations this week after its request for an $18,000 grant was refused by the federal health and welfare department, it was announced Wednesday.

Wendy Rycroft, an agency director, said the request was denied because the federal department "decided we do not come under their mandate."

Drunk Centres Set

EDMONTON (CP) — Detoxification centres based on the premise that drunken persons are ill rather than criminal soon will be established in Edmonton and Calgary, Health Minister Neil Crawford said Wednesday.

Crawford, in a news release, said the centres, funded for 1973-74 by $125,000 from the provincial government and $600,000 from the Alcoholism and Drug Abuse Commission and the Alberta Hospital Services Commission, will be operating by the end of January.

Program 'Failure'

REGINA (CP) — A reduction in the rental fee on land leased through the provincial land bank commission points up the failure of the program, Jack Wiebe, Liberal member of the legislature for Morse, said Wednesday.

Wiebe said in a prepared statement that the reduction shows farmers don't have confidence in the program and that the land bank commission is having a difficult time finding young farmers interested in renting.

Milk to Japan

WINNIPEG (CP) — Modern Dairies Ltd. of Winnipeg has sold several hundred thousand pounds of Manitoba-produced skim milk powder to dairies in Japan.

Company President J. Gordon Speirs said the sale represents the first export of Manitoba dairy products to the Far East. He said the arrangement is an "open-ended" one which could involve many millions of pounds of skim milk powder over the next several years.

A company official said the first shipment of 240,000 pounds of milk powder valued at between $75,000 and $80,000 was shipped last week.

'Bitter-Sweet' Plan

EDMONTON C(P) — Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan's call for all-out grain production this year indicates the federal government still is "flying by the seat of its pants" without a national grains policy, a National Farmers Union spokesman said Wednesday.

Bill Dascavich, the union's Alberta co-ordinator, said Whelan's call to farmers Tuesday to produce all the grain they can, including wheat, carried a "bitter-sweet flavor."

Care Plus Attention Gives Seeds Head Start

The impatient gardener, as opposed to the reluctant gardener, finds it impossible to wait until outdoor soil is suitable for sowing seeds. Choosing something difficult to grow, an early beginning is made indoors.

Now I'm all for conquering difficulties when it comes to growing plants, but I sometimes wonder what makes beginners choose things like tuberous begonias and gloxinias to grow from seeds. Perhaps the colored pictures of large flowers on the seed packets are a deciding factor.

When the packet is opened, we find a tiny pinch of fine dust-like seeds. If we could count them, we might find 100 seeds or 50, according to what we pay. The only way to find out is to grow the seeds carefully to maturity. Then compare the cost with what would be paid if buying the same number of plants of the same kind.

So here we are, faced with a pinch of fine, fine seeds to be sown.

The method given suits all fine seeds, petunias, lobelia, streptocarpus, though some of these are comparatively easy.

Old greenhouse gardeners used a hollow-surfaced brick in a pan of water, but today we recommend a shallow clay pot as the more easily obtained container, for the less soil the less moisture to be kept warmed. These small seeds need moisture, warmth and air to germinate. If no shallow pot, fill a regular pot two thirds up with charcoal, broken brick or broken pot pieces, and a trickling of peat moss between. All this ensures drainage and a small reserve of moisture.

Top off with an inch of finely screened leafmould and compost, sterilized with boiling water, then partially dried.

For fine seed, have the soil surface only a quarter-inch below the pot rim, and leave the surface unsmoothed. This permits the tiny seeds to be distributed between the particles without covering.

Using a five-inch wide pot, the seed is carefully scattered over the whole surface, not dumped in one spot.

Cover the pot with a piece of clean glass and double thickness of paper. Keep the pot in the home temperature of 70 to 75 deg. F. Twice each day, wipe the moisture from underside of the glass to prevent droplets smothering embryos as they emerge.

Once weekly, stand the pot in lukewarm water up to the rim for one hour; drain the surplus before standing on a saucer again. The peat particles will hold a small moisture supply without sogginess.

Around 10 days later, specks of bright green should be visible. You may need a hand lens to see them for they are no larger than a pin point. Remove the paper shade, but keep the glass. After a few more days, raise the glass on one side with a match to admit more air. Keep the pot in good window light (not sunshine), turning it several times daily. Three to four weeks later, the still small seedlings are transferred to individual pots.

Tiny seeds mean tiny seedlings, but ultimately the plants reach a size truly astounding. But even the mightly pine was once a pine cone seed.

SOLUTION FRIDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Today's deal, which arose in a rubber-bridge game, is presented as a bridge "mystery." You are informed that our South declarer made a mistake in his play, and went down to defeat. It is your job to find South's error. Neither side vulnerable. South deals.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Four of ♡.

On West's opening lead of the heart four, declarer put up dummy's queen, taking the finesse against West's hoped-for king. Upon winning the trick with his king, East returned his remaining heart, driving out dummy's ace, and simultaneously establishing West's heart suit.

Dummy's jack of clubs was led next, and when East followed suit with the deuce, South put up his ace, on the outside chance of catching West with the singleton king. When the king failed to drop, declarer led another club. West took his king and then proceeded to cash three heart tricks. The result was that declarer was down one. What was declarer's error?

Declarer, incidentally, was quite correct in spurning the club finesse. In a sense, declarer was taking out insurance against West's having been dealt the singleton king of clubs; and declarer's play was aimed at minimizing the danger of West getting the lead to cash his established hearts. Declarer's error was the taking of the heart finesse at trick one. Instead, he should have won the trick with the board's ace. Let us see why.

If the seven outstanding hearts were divided 5-2, then by putting up dummy's ace, East would now have remaining either the singleton king, the singleton jack, or the singleton 10.

When declarer next attacked the clubs, he would lose to West's king. West would then return a heart to East's king — but East would have no heart to play back. If, in theory, East's remaining heart was either the jack or the 10, the same situation would exist. And if West now played his (hypothetical) king, felling partner's (hypothetical) 10, South's remaining nine-six would prevent West from cashing the rest of his hearts.

The reason why East, if he held only two hearts, had to have the king, jack or 10, is this: if West held the K-J-10-x-x of hearts and the club king, West surely would have made a non-vulnerable overcall of one heart. And West had not overcalled.

Paper Recycling Costly, But Will Continue

The first progress report on Oak Bay's pilot project of collecting newspapers for recycling on a chosen route of 500 Uplands homes shows it to be a costly experiment.

The report, studied at a meeting of Oak Bay council's works committee Wednesday night, showed that the first collection resulted in 2.7 tons of newspapers being picked up from 22.6 per cent of the homes. The costs were $168.16 and money gained from sale of the newspapers, $13.50.

The second collection—from 11 per cent of the homes — cost $78.39 and netted $5.25 from sale of the paper. Only eight per cent of the homes participated in the third collection which cost $43.10 and netted $2.50.

The first curbside collection was carried out Jan. 6. To be done on a once-a-month basis, the collection of 1.1 tons cost $65.10 and netted $5.50.

Ald. John Goult observed," Basically you need two things to make this work; a good system of doing it and education. If people want this kind of thing done, so far the experiment has shown they're going to have to pay for it."

Ald. Douglas McLelland said "I think we're off the beam. The recycling program is a grass-roots movement." He said dedicated volunteers were an integral part of such a program.

Instead of collecting from individual homes, McLelland said it might be far more practical to set up a base, or bases, in Oak Bay where people could bring their newspapers for recycling.

"You only need some small sort of shelter," he said, "the costs would decrease, it would work."

He noted, that the project, first of its kind in the Greater Victoria area, was producing statistics that would be of vital interest to the Capital Regional District.

Ald. Douglas Watts agreed with McLelland that the information being obtained was invaluable, adding "at the same time we should be looking at other ways needed to increase efficiency."

McLelland replied, "We're not trying to eliminate costs but to reduce them to a bearable level."

Municipal engineer-planner Geoffrey White was asked to study where collection depots could be placed in the municipality and the committee agreed that the pilot project should continue for the time being.

Curtis Hits Arrangements On Region Garbage Costs

The Capital Regional District will take a second look at garbage disposal cost-sharing among member municipalities.

Board directors, in a majority vote, decided Wednesday that allocating costs of the half-mill project on a population basis should be reconsidered by the board.

It had earlier been decided to use population as the basis of cost sharing, rather than assessments or a combination of the two.

Retiring board chairman Hugh Curtis, the Saanich mayor, said his municipality is "most unhappy" at the proposed cost sharing arrangement.

On a population basis only, Saanich's share would be $87,121. Using assessments or a combination of assessments and population would produce a range of $79,778 to $85,286.

Earlier, Curtis said that "with the benefit of hindsight" he could see that the regional district should have made a tour of municipalities to explain the proposed garbage disposal function.

He said suspicion about the growth of regional district government is understandable "particularly if no effort is made to detail the proposal in a direct contact. It is suggested that this activity become an automatic part of any move towards expansion of our activities on behalf of components of the region."

"If we have failed at all in developing the concept of regional government — and I take my share of the blame for any shortcomings — it is in the area of relationships with municipal councils and other established organizations," he said.

"In spite of my best intentions — the regional board has not fully established the kind of close co-operative link with councils with the result that any suggestion to take on an additional regional function is certain to bring the charge of 'empire building,' 'loss of local autonomy' and so on. That is the case in solid waste disposal."

Labor Council Chief Returned

Groves, a member of the International Woodworkers of America, was unopposed.

Re-elected first vice-president was John Schibli of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Owen Williams of the International Brotherhood of Painters and Allied Trades was elected second vice-president.

Larry Ryan was unopposed as full-time secretary-treasurer. He is a member of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers.

Salt Spring Action Sought

Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer will be asked to give his "early attention" to sending the Salt Spring Island community plan to the cabinet for approval.

The Capital Regional District board agreed Wednesday to ask the minister to do this in response to a request by Salt Spring Island director Marc Holmes.

Retiring regional board chairman Hugh Curtis said both the Salt Spring plan and the first stage of the over-all regional plan, covering the Gulf Islands, are being held up at the proviancial government level.

The Salt Spring plan had undergone study and revision by many interested groups and was overdue for implementation. Delay at the provincial level was "without valid justification."

Throne Speech Passes

Times News Services

OTTAWA (CP) — The minority Liberal government came through its third confidence test in less than a week Wednesday as the Commons approved a mption to accept the speech from the throne.

The motion, concluding an eight-day debate on the throne speech, read when Parliament opened Jan. 4, was opposed only by Conservatives.

Standings in the 264-seat House are Liberal 109, Conservative 107, NDP 31, Social Credit 15 and Independent two.

The vote was taken in a half-filled Commons with only one party leader present — Opposition Leader Stanfield. Prime Minister Trudeau was absent because of the death of his mother Tuesday in Montreal and both NDP Leader David Lewis and Social Credit Leader Real Caouette were occupied by outside meetings.

The House begins work today on supplementary spending estimates which the government must have passed to carry on federal business.

This shifts the government into another grey area where NDP support is not guaranteed except on straightforward confidence motions.

The major item of Commons business Wednesday was introduction of a bill by Manpower Minister Robert Andras that would cut off employment insurance benefits to people who quit jobs "without just cause" or who are fired for misconduct.

It would also deny benefits to unemployed persons who refuse other work "without good cause."

Andras said the legislation, if approved by the House, will save the country more than $100 million annually and end the major source of unemployment insurance abuse.

TAXING TEST for citizens is the income tax form, 11 feet long when glued edge-to-edge as it was held by Conservative MP Sinclair Stevens while he talked to reporters Wednesday. Stevens and Tory House Leader Gerald Baldwin criticized the new federal form as too long, too complicated and made of too heavy paper, making it "impossible" to make carbon copies.

Ottawa to Close POs If Strikes Continue

Times News Services

Striking postal workers blocked mail in Toronto for a second day today and a government source said Ottawa planned to shut down all post offices in the affected areas if the walkouts continued.

This would result in the total interruption of postal services if the walkouts, which occurred in Toronto, Vancouver and Belleville earlier this week, spread to other localities.

A post office spokesman said virtually no mail was being delivered in Toronto, heart of two million people, and the only intra-Metro movement was between Scarborough borough in the east and a portion of the western outskirts.

A post office spokesman said virtually no mail was being delivered in Toronto, heart of the six-municipality area of two million people, and the only intra-Metro movement was between Scarborough borough in the east and a portion of the western outskirts.

Information officer Ed Roworth, the spokesman said that to avoid adding to a pile of more than one million items here, Toronto-bound mail from elsewhere in Canada was being held at post offices en route.

Even if the strike had ended, it would have taken all day to clear up the backlog of one million pieces of mail from Wednesday's walkout.

Because of this, letter carriers had been told by the post office not to report for work until the backlog had been cleared. Bob McGarry, president of District Five of the Letter Carriers Union called the order a lockout and said the post office was "irresponsible."

Postal workers at Vancouver, however, returned to work Wednesday night after a 24-hour walkout to protest the lack of progress in negotiations.

Ottawa officials said the government is not prepared to put up with the disastrous rotating strikes which took place in 1970. The mails were thoroughly disrupted over a three-month period, yet the average postal worker lost only five days pay through the hit-and-run tactics.

This time, the government has vowed that if one office is struck by the union members, all offices depending on the first one will be shut down. And all workers will suffer financially.

The government is hoping

$50,000 FOR STRAYS

It costs Victoria nearly $50,000 annually to keep stray cats and dogs off the streets, Ald. Ove Witt told city council finance committee today.

"That's a fantastic amount of money to spend on animals that are going to be buried three feet under anyway," he commented in a discussion on giving the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals a $23,000 per year two-year contract with the city.

Witt said it cost $48,628 to catch, keep and kill cats and dogs — $24,868 went on cats; $12,368 went on dogs.

"For example, 2,300 cats were brought in," Witt said. "Five hundred of them were adopted. Seventeen hundred were kept for up to three days at about $8 per day. Then it cost $5,265 to do away with them."

It was noted that the cost of dealing with unwanted pets was costing more than half the SPCA's total budget of $83,000.

The society provides two full-time pound men, keeps an office and has staffed, heated, medically-inspected kennels. It also operates a 24-hour emergency service.

A joint announcement from Hanoi and the Florida White House today said the secret Vietnam peace talks in Paris will resume Tuesday "for the purpose of completing the text of an agreement."

In Saigon, government sources said a ceasefire pact will be signed within two weeks as heavy fighting flared near the capital with both sides apparently jockeying to improve their positions in anticipation of the ceasefire.

Emphasizing that he was reading language approved by both the United States and North Vietnam, White House press secretary Ronald Ziegler said:

"Dr. Henry Kissinger will resume private negotiations with special adviser Le Duc Tho and minister Xuan Thuy on Jan. 23, 1973, for the purpose of completing the text of an agreement."

Ziegler indicated Kissinger, President Nixon's special envoy, would leave Washington Monday for Paris and said he could not predict how long the envoy might remain there.

Asked whether this would be the final meeting of Kissinger and the North Vietnamese, Ziegler said: "The announcement will have to speak for itself."

Ziegler said the United States would have no comment on the negotiations "until a final agreement is reached."

Asked whether a ceasefire might take effect in Indochina prior to completion of the promised peace agreement, Ziegler said "there has been an awful lot of speculation along that line," but added he was not prepared to "address that speculation."

Ziegler also announced that U.S. Army Gen. Alexander M. Haig Jr. now in Bangkok, Thailand, as part of a Southeast Asia tour to discuss the Paris talks, would return to Saigon Saturday and meet again with South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu. He said he did not know whether Haig would return to Washington prior to Kissinger's departure.

Escalation of battlefield fighting sparked the heaviest raids by U.S. warplanes over the south in more than two months, military spokesmen claimed today.

South Vietnamese troops encountered stiff resistance for the second consecutive day today in the Michelin Rubber Plantation, 40 miles northwest of Saigon, where a major Cold Cure?

MONTREAL (CP) — A cure for the common cold may be available within the next few years as the result of a research program at the Montreal Institute of Microbiology.

The institute's medical director said Wednesday a synthetic chemical compound has been tested in the laboratory during the past year and has proved effective against a range of cold viruses in a tissue cell culture.

"We tested the compound against the three major groups of cold viruses and it was 100 per cent active in preventing the viruses from growing in the culture," Dr. Armand Frappier said in an interview.

"There are at least 60 cold viruses but biologically there is little difference between them and the effects on the three groups of viruses would apply to all. We feel the compound would be effective against all 60."

'Canada First' Policy On Oil Exports Unchanged

OTTAWA (CP) — The worsening U.S. heating oil shortage has opened the door for what amounts to full-capacity exports of Western Canada supplies.

But the Canadian policy remains unchanged and remains aloof from a so-called continental policy, federal spokesmen said today.

They said Deputy Minister Jack Austin of the federal energy department was misinterpreted Wednesday in being quoted as saying that some progress has been made on sharing oil supplies in an emergency.

The spokesmen said that applies solely to the talks that have been proceeding privately and quietly for two years or more on another kind of emergency — how Eastern Canada would get its imported oil in the event of any situation threatening supplies now coming from Venezuela, the Middle East and elsewhere.

It has been the U.S. fear that if Eastern Canada oil reserves were cut off, its imports from Western Canada also would dry up as the Canadian tap was turned to Eastern Canada.

The current situation is another kind of emergency that has no bearing on existing discussions, they said.

President Nixon Wednesday announced what amounts to temporary full-capacity access for Western Canada oil east of the Rockies, with more oil also bound for the West Coast, which has not been subject to the formal quota system.

But the official Canadian position on oil-sharing remains as spelled out last week by Energy Minister Donald Macdonald, a spokesman said.

The minister told the Commons last week that an oil-sharing agreement — or continental approach — would apply only if all North America is cut off from its foreign suppliers.

PLANNED MURDER UP DURING HANGING BAN

CALGARY (CP) — The Herald says unpublished figures prepared by the federal government show the number of murders involving premeditation or committed in the course of other crimes increased sharply during the ban on capital punishment.

Statistics released on murders have only given the bare totals, the paper said, but the judicial section of Statistics Canada has broken these down according to motive, as determined by police.

Murder for revenge during the first three years of the capital punishment ban, 1968-70, increased to 76 from 57 in the three years before the ban.

During the same time, murders in the course of robbery and theft almost doubled to 119 from 61 and those committed during sexual assault rose to 44 from 28.

Murders in the course of other criminal acts rose to 61 from 11, but the paper said this category is misleading because of 40 of those deaths were attributed to an arson fire in Quebec.

INCHES FROM DEATH, but the driver of the little station wagon was not seriously injured when the large truck overturned onto his car at a Vancouver intersection. Rush-hour traffic was tied up for several hours as wreckers struggled to right the overturned truck.

Only the Insane Know Who's Sane?

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Who's sane? Who's insane?

The psychiatrists and staffs of mental hospitals cannot be trusted to tell the difference, says Prof. David L. Rosenhan, a Stanford University psychologist.

Rosenhan says he and seven other sane investigators arranged as a test to be admitted as schizophrenic patients in 12 different mental hospitals, yet none of the eight was found to be sane by hospital professionals.

But Rosenhan says it was "quite common" for actual psychiatric patients to identify correctly the "pseudo-patient" imposters.

Rosenhan said he and his seven colleagues eventually were released as "schizophrenics in remission," despite their best efforts to convince the hospital staff of their sanity.

"We now know that we cannot distinguish insanity from sanity," Rosenhan said.

"We continue to label patients 'schizophrenic,' 'manic-depressive,' and 'insane' as if in those words we had captured the essence of understanding," he wrote.

"The facts of the matter are that we have known for a long time that our diagnoses often are not useful or reliable, but we have nevertheless continued to use them."

Rosenhan seid he and the other pseudo-patients were shocked and horrified by their experiences.

But, he said, they did not blame the hospital staffs.

"By and large, they were well-intentioned people, and in no way do we want to malign them," he said.

Rosenhan said the pseudo-patient group included a psychiatrist, a pediatrician, a painter, a housewife, a Stanford psychology graduate student and three other psychologists.

He said they gained admission to hospitals in California, Oregon, Pennsylvania, New York and Delaware by feigning symptoms of schizophrenia.

"The uniform failure to recognize sanity cannot be attributed to the quality of treatment facilities," Rosenhan said. "While there was considerable variability between them, several are considered excellent.

"Nor can it be alleged that there simply was not enough time to observe the pseudo-patients. Length of hospitalization ranged from seven to 52 days, with an average of 19 days."

Evans Unveils Oil Spill Ban

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — Gov. Dan Evans unveiled an executive request bill Thursday which would tax oil shipments for control of spills.

It calls for a levy of two cents per barrel to create an insurance fund for oil spill prevention and cleanup.

"We're not trying to build up a monumental fund," the governor said. "This will be sufficient not only to supply the immediate requirements of protection and insurance but do it for some years to come."

Wild Dog Packs Threaten Ontario Villagers

MOOSONEE, Ont. (CP) — More and more people in this James Bay community are carrying sticks when they walk the streets.

Fresh in their minds is the case of Jane Marks who was attacked by a pack of dogs Dec. 23 and still is in hospital recovering from more than 200 stitches needed to close wounds in her arms, legs and face.

The stick acts like a jack-nife or slingshot in your pocket while walking down a lonely wooded path. There is a sense of security.

But the danger that lurks here is real.

Mrs. Marks was hauled down by a pack of dogs which police say have no real owners. They run loose — leftovers from the days when people used dogs to haul supplies.

The day of the dogsled has practically vanished. The snowmobile now is the vehicle of winter transportation.

"Mrs. Marks is quite well now," said Dr. N. L. Fraser. "We don't get this type of thing often but one is enough to scare anybody."

The five-man provincial police detachment here is forced to shoot stray dogs with shotguns.

"Hell, we're just like anyone else," said a police spokesman. "We don't like shooting dogs but we have to — for the public's sake."

A salesman from Kirkland Lake said he drove past the community's dump and saw a pack of about eight.

"There was just no way I was going to get out of that car," he said. "They looked bad."

Many of the bitches in this community and up the western James Bay coast have their litters in the bush and the young are half wild.

"It's just like they were part wolf," said a police spokesman.

Five-Car Collision

An estimated $2,700 damage resulted from a five-car collision on an "icy" section of the Pat Bay Highway Wednesday, Central Saanich police said today.

All five drivers were unhurt, police said.

Cars driven by John Howard Nyru, 2467 Mt. St. Michael's, and John Harrison, 10082 Tsaykum, skidded near the intersection at Mt. Newton Cross Road and collided. Both cars remained on the road.

Mrs. Bernard Walsh, 4131 Borden, saw the first two cars and skidded onto a soft shoulder to avoid them. Her car was undamaged, police said.

Emilio Navarro, 10148 Resthaven, also tried to avoid the first two cars and slid into a ditch.

A car driven by Mrs. Diane McBratney, 1340 Munro, spun on the ice and crashed into the concrete median, said police.

All cars were heading toward the city in the morning rush hour.

Manslaughter Charge

Ernest Lavern Hotvedt, charged with non-capital murder Nov. 5, will face a lesser charge of manslaughter Friday, Crown Prosecutor Alan Bigelow said today.

Rape Trial Verdict: Guilty, Jury Suggests Leniency

George Jerome Makow was convicted of rape by a B.C. Supreme Court jury here Wednesday.

After five hours of deliberation the jury returned its verdict with a recommendation for leniency.

He was charged by Colwood RCMP following an incident in the Highlands district Nov. 17 involving a 23-year-old Saanich woman.

The complainant, a registered nurse, testified during the three-day trial that Makow and a female passenger had picked her up on Douglas Street Nov. 16 while hitch-hiking home.

She told the jury of three women and nine men that the accused dropped off the other woman and drove to the wooded area where she was forced to comply with his demands.

Makow told the court he made no threats nor exercised any force. He said the woman had taken "quite an active part" in the intercourse.

In his address to the jury, defence counsel Harold Turnham said, "There is no question that intercourse took place."

The question was whether or not there was voluntary consent, said Turnham.

He told the jury that Makow did not strike the woman and had no weapons on his person.

"And yet she says she was in fear of bodily harm . . . She didn't put up any struggle at all," said Turnham.

In his summation, Prosecutor Alan Bigelow said the jury must assess the credibility of each witness and decide whose testimony to believe — that of the accused or that of the complainant.

Turnham had pointed out that the woman hitch-hiked regularly.

"There's no open season on hitch-hikers," said Bigelow. "This girl isn't on trial for hitch-hiking — this man's on trial for rape."

Turnham also mentioned the woman had admitted to being a casual user of marijuana.

"That doesn't allow this man to come along and rape her just because she's taken pot," said Bigelow.

In his charge to the jury, McIntyre said the issue was on the nature of the consent — was it voluntary or forced?

Testimony concerning the character of the witnesses was given "so that you can form some idea of who you're going to believe," said McIntyre.

"No matter what her character, if she did not consent, it's rape," he said.

The jury retired about 2 p.m. and returned shortly after 7 p.m. They returned to the courtroom once to ask for further legal instructions from McIntyre and to have some of the evidence read back by a court reporter.

After four days of testimony given by 25 witnesses, the all-male-jury retired at 3:50 p.m. Jan. 11. It returned twice for further legal instruction from the judge and at 2:45 a.m. advised the court it was unable to reach a verdict.

In Canadian law, anyone convicted of manslaughter is liable to imprisonment for life." The "minimum punishment" for non-capital murder is life imprisonment.

LIP Grant Approved For Parks

A wide variety of improvements in the city's parks will be made under a Local Initiatives Program approved for Victoria Wednesday.

The $61,500 federal grant will put 14 people to work for six months, city council's parks committee was told today.

The money will be spent on cleaning up Smith's Hill, a new park at the Saanich boundary near Cook; replacing playground fences, fixing boulevards, reconditioning flower beds and other projects.

Part of the grant will go to pay for improvements to the Hollywood Park drainage system.

. . . CEASEFIRE TALKS

communist buildup of 8,000 men with armor and artillery was reported. The buildup poses a major threat to the South Vietnamese capital and its outlying areas.

Military sources said 13 government soldiers were killed and 40 wounded in the fighting there Wednesday, and the battle continued today when a large communist force attacked a 1,000-man South Vietnamese field position.

U.S. warplanes, no longer in action over North Vietnam, struck heavily in the area around Saigon and also in northernmost Quang Tri province where fighting also continued in the government campaign to push North Vietnamese forces back into the demilitarized zone (DMZ) between the two Vietnams.

The Saigon sources said Thieu and his National Security Council agreed Wednesday night to the terms of the ceasefire worked out between Kissinger and Le Duc Tho.

South Vietnam believes it could have obtained more concessions in the peace agreement but was willing to sign believing it had obtained sufficient concessions to guarantee the future of the country, the sources said.

In Bangkok, U.S. Ambassador Leonard Unger told the American Chamber of Commerce that U.S. military strength in Thailand will be scaled down when the Vietnam war ends, but sufficient strength will be maintained to prevent violations of the peace agreement. There now are 49,000 U.S. troops stationed in Thailand, carrying on the air war in Vietnam.

The draft agreement calls for a withdrawal of all U.S. forces from Vietnam within 60 days of signing, but there is no prohibition against U.S. forces in Thailand or against U.S. naval forces in the area.

President Thieu has given his province chiefs wide latitude to make political arrests after the coming ceasefire and has also empowered them to "shoot troublemakers" on the spot, reliable South Vietnamese sources said Wednesday.

Wherever possible, American sources added, those arrested are to be charged with common crimes instead of political ones because, it is acknowledged, the prisoners are easier to deal with that way. The communist demand for release of all political prisoners has been a sticking point in the Paris negotiations and the government's intention, sources said, is to keep the number of prisoners down, at least on paper.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A suspended sentence and two-year probationary term were ordered by Judge William Ostler in provincial court Wednesday for a 19-year-old Victoria man on a charge of attempted breaking and entering.

Earlier, Michael Cousins, of 1955 Ashgrove, had pleaded guilty to unlawfully trying to enter Highland Woodworkers Ltd., 116 Dallas, early on Dec. 28.

In his report, the probation officer noted that Cousins was easily led by his peers.

Prosecutor J. W. Anderson, reminded the judge "he was alone at the time" and that the act was "a most deliberate one."

Asked by Ostler if he had been talked into the incident, Cousins replied:

"Well, I was broke and they offered me a hundred bucks."

Noting that the probation officer had recommended a suspended sentence, Ostler reminded Cousins that this was the second time he had committed an offence and been put on probation.

"This, as far as I am concerned," he said, "is the last time you'll get away with this sort of thing."

that the public will blame the postal employees for the mail services interruption, because the employees walked out first, following the breakdown in contract negotiations Tuesday.

The Canadian Union of Postal Workers and the Letter Carriers' Union of Canada have been free to strike legally since Dec. 21, following conciliation proceedings.

Meanwhile, at Belleville, Ont., mail service returned to normal Wednesday night after letter carriers withdrew picket lines set up earlier in the day.

The picket lines were withdrawn on an understanding that an agreement would be reached in the dispute with the federal treasury board within 48 hours, or the strike would resume.

One factor in the Belleville situation is that the Unemployment Insurance Commission's central commuter is located there and officials said 24,000 pieces of mail were delayed.

The computer centre is responsible for UIC payments throughout the province. Officials said the UIC has a private delivery service to take mail to district offices in the event of a postal disruption.

Meanwhile, Postmaster-General Andre Ouellet said in the House of Commons the government is ready to accept all terms of a conciliation board report in its contract dispute with postal workers.

Faced with opposition suggestions that the government was backing away from the report and negotiations had broken down, Ouellet assured the House the government position has not changed and a contract may be signed soon.

Panarctic

Panarctic Oils Ltd., in which the federal government holds 45 per cent of the equity, is being expanded for the fourth time following the discovery of four major gas fields in the Arctic.

The government and its industry partners in Panarctic report they are putting another $25 million into the firm. The federal contribution in this expansion is $11.2 million.

The expansion brings Panarctic's total financing to $101 million, of which $45.5 million came from the federal government.

Star

Directors of Toronto Star Ltd. have approved a three-for-one split of the company's common and class B, C and D shares. Shareholders will vote on the recommendation at a special meeting Feb. 15.

Hobrough

Hobrough Ltd. of Vancouver and Teledyne Geotronics of Long Beach, Calif., have agreed in principle to form a new equally-owned company to be known as Geo-Gestalt Inc., a Hobrough director reports.

Jeremy Kendall, president of Venturetek International Ltd., Toronto, which controls 40 per cent of Hobrough's stock, said in a statement a formal agreement is expected to be signed by the end of February to set up the new company located in Long Beach.

The deal is awaiting approval of the department of industry, trade and commerce whose blessing is being sought because Hobrough, incorporated in 1967, has received substantial support from Canadian federal incentive programs.

The Vancouver firm is a public corporation that holds world-wide patents for the Gestalt Photo Mapper (GPM) which it has developed.

Teledyne Geotronics is an aerial survey company and has offices throughout the United States and the Middle and Far East.

The rate of return on average total capital for 1972 was 7.8 per cent, compared with 7.4 per cent in 1971.

Drill Rigs Ready for Peace Parcels

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

A busy drilling program is building to a climax in the Peace River area against the background of oil and gas shortages and leaping prices.

At the request of oil companies, the provincial government has made a record 210 parcels of land available for bids in the Jan. 31 competition. Some 748,000 acres are involved.

Most of the parcels will be drilling reservations and leases rather than exploration property. Many companies have already marked out areas for drilling and are ready to proceed now that the peak drilling season has arrived.

Peace River drilling is carried out between January and April while muskeg land is frozen and transportation is relatively easy.

Drilling is already under way on leases granted in earlier bidding competitions.

At present there are 24 drilling rigs at work, although the season is just beginning.

A peak of 40 rigs is expected after the sale, the number restricted only because that is about all that will be available.

Major reason for the growing interest in the Peace River region is that natural gas prices are going up and the gas can readily be brought to market as soon as it is located.

The area is already well-laced with pipelines. Although gas and oil fields are relatively minor, they are in a low-cost area, because of the ease of transportation.

It carries natural gas to the Vancouver area.

Inland Natural Gas Company has a 624-mile line to carry gas from the Peace River to the Cariboo, Okanagan and West Kootenay.

There are two main crude oil pipelines. Trans Prairie Pipelines Ltd. gathers oil from fields scattered north and east of Fort St. John while British Columbia Oil Transmission Company gathers from an area northwest of Fort St. John.

Both lines deliver crude oil to the terminal facilities of Western Pacific Products and Crude Oil Pipelines Ltd. at Taylor, southeast of Fort St. John.

Some oil is refined at Taylor and Prince George but most is transported in Western Pacific's 505-mile 12-inch pipe to Kamloops. In turn a small amount is refined there but the bulk is piped to connect with the Edmonton-to-Vancouver Trans Mountain Oil Pipe Line Company pipe.

The crude is carried to refineries in Vancouver and Washington State.

Development of the Peace River has been concentrated mainly in the past 20 years. In 1953 there were only three gasfields located. First commercial oil discovery was made in 1955.

While all oil companies are participating in the Peace River development, it is particularly attractive for small companies because exploration and development costs are low and finds are usually small.

Meanwhile, the big companies are concentrating their major efforts in what is called in the trade "elephant country", the high-cost, big find Arctic.

The big companies are also pressing the search for offshore oil and gas, particularly on the Atlantic coast, although there has been a resumption in activity off the west coast of Vancouver Island.

Most of the activity in the Canadian Pacific consisted of seismic exploration, as weather permits, in the open Pacific and near the Queen Charlotte Islands.

While the January 31 bidding will be aimed mainly at obtaining drilling permits, a subsequent competition in April will be mainly for large-acreage exploration permits.

The department of mines and petroleum resources this week set the next bidding date for April 4 with deadline for posting requests set for Feb. 6.

TAX TIPS

This information is supplied by the federal department of national revenue. If further details are required, contact the Victoria District Taxation Office between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. at 388-3551. For those living outside the Victoria exchange area, ask the long-distance operator for Zenith 0-4000 and the call will be placed without charge.

Q. How about the exemption for a child who was 16 years of age or older at the end of a taxation year?

A. If the net income of the child for the year is not more than $1,050, the allowable personal exemption is $550. Where the net income of the dependent child is over $1,050, but not over $1,600, the exemption of $550 must be reduced by the amount of the child's net income over $1,050. If the child's net income exceeds $1,600, once again that child is not a dependant for income tax purposes.

Q. I am a widow supporting a 16-year-old son who is in receipt of an orphan's benefit as well as other pension benefits totalling $400 for the year. I understand that I can no longer claim the full equivalent of married exemption. Is this correct?

A. Yes. Commencing in 1972 if the dependent person's income is in excess of $250 then the full exemption cannot be claimed. Your married equivalent exemption will be $1,200 ($1,600 less $400) and not $1,350.

Q. Is it correct, there was no change for the 1972 taxation year in the rules for calculating personal exemptions for supporting wholly dependent children?

A. That is not quite correct. Prior to 1972, if a child's net income exceeded $950, that child would not usually qualify as a dependant for income tax purposes. For 1972 and subsequent years, that income limitation has been changed.

Q. What about changes in allowable deductions from income?

A. With regard to deductions from income, the personal exemption has been raised to $1,500 from $1,000 for single persons, and to $2,850 from $2,000 for married persons. In addition, all taxpayers age 65 and over will receive a special exemption of $1,000.

Q. I have heard a great deal in recent months about tax reform and how I may be affected by it. Is there any one area which will concern everyone?

A. Changes which have been made in the allowable personal exemptions will affect all of us when we file 1972 income tax returns in the early part of 1973.

Japanese Housing Boom Benefit to B.C. Lumber

VANCOUVER (CP) — A housing boom in Japan has brightened marketing prospects for the lumber business in B.C.

The price of sawlogs on the lower B.C. coast is being pushed up by as much as 50 per cent as Japanese buyers move into the market in an attempt to meet a tremendous demand for lumber in their own country.

The current rising market has lasted more than three years. Although there is uncertainty about developments in the United States, Canada's largest customer, the European market remains strong.

A forest company spokesman said an upturn in non-residential construction could prevent a decline in American sales caused by an anticipated cut in the U.S. housing program.

A resurgence of Japanese demand has caused the trading companies to manufacture their lumber here rather than ship raw logs to Japan. And in a sense, the Japanese outsmarted themselves.

The Japanese cut back on lumber purchases last year, taking only 228 million board feet from B.C. in the first nine months of 1972 compared with 407 million board feet in all of 1971 and 1970.

Forest industry executives believe the Japanese allowed their purchases to drop because they thought the U.S. market would slacken, causing lumber prices to fall.

When this failed to happen, the Japanese were faced with diminished stocks and a voracious appetite for lumber.

Reports from Japan indiate the lumber shortage there has reached crisis proportions because of a housing boom and delay in purchases. Prime Minister Tanaka's government has ordered a special mission to buy building supplies.

One buyer said prices had risen during the past three months to $160 from $120 for 1,000 board feet of hemlock.

FIVE DELISTED

VANCOUVER (CP) — Shares of five Vancouver-based junior industrial companies were delisted by the Vancouver Stock Exchange Wednesday. All five had been suspended from trading for some time.

The companies are 4-F Foods Ld., International Space Modules Ltd., Dog 'N Suds Food Services Ltd., Marlex Enviro-Systems and Resources Ltd. and the Preference Shares of Imperial Marine Industries Ltd.

The exchange said the stocks were removed from the trading list because the companies had not complied with listing requirements. The companies may apply for relisting in the future if they are able to meet VSE requirements.

Imperial Marine's common shares which traded Wednesday in the 30-40 cents range, remain on the VSE list.

The company's preference shares were issued in at $2 each March last year by means of a rights offering to common shareholders. The stock traded for a short period and was then suspended in April at a price of $1.50.

Imperial Marine agreed to redeem the preference shares at $2 each after the VSE ruled that the issue had been made null and void by the failure of a brokerage firm to fulfill a commitment relating to the issue of rights which led to the preference share issue.

Teacher Takes Blame For Fire

Fire broke out at Colquitz junior high school this morning after a teacher brought a lighted propane heater into a room containing two fibreglass canoe moulds.

No one was injured and the fire was contained in the industrial arts room. Only one of the boat molds was destroyed but choking black smoke damaged the room and adjacent halls. A preliminary estimate of damage was $2,500.

"I guess it's my fault," said Archibald van Bursick, industrial arts teacher at the school, as he surveyed the damage.

He said he brought the heater, which he thought was extinguished, and the two moulds indoors about 8:15 a.m. Fire broke out about 20 minutes later.

"It was just pure carelessness," he told Saanich police.

Fire Chief Harold Gaines said at the fire scene that propane should never be used where highly flammable vapors such as those from fibreglassing are present.

BACK TO SCHOOL, but not for long. That was the story at Colquitz junior secondary school this morning as a fire in an industrial arts room emptied the building. Firemen "went in white and came out black," said one officer as the blaze generated sooty dark smoke. Students, who have already missed three days of school this week because of a janitors' strike, were obviously not broken-hearted to suffer yet another interruption. They formed a cavorting audience on the playing field as firemen went to work.

School District Denies Parent Scab List Charge

Victoria Times
SECOND SECTION

The accusation was made Wednesday night by Bob Cunningham, first vice-president of Local 382 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, representing 268 janitors and maintenance staff on strike since last Friday.

Cunningham claimed names are being taken of volunteer parents and being given to school principals.

A. J. Longmore, school district superintendent, said telephone callers volunteering their services are being told the school district cannot make any recommendations. No names are being taken or given to principals.

School district community relations officer Bill Stavdal said it is the board's policy that it was an individual matter between principals and parents.

But S. J. Willis junior high school principal H. R. Dawson said today he "definitely disputes" Stavdal's statement.

"It is up to the board and the union and the community. It is not up to principals, the opening and closing of buildings and the actual mechanics for cleaning buildings," he said.

Cunningham, speaking at Victoria Labor Council, also charged that a front-page photograph in Wednesday's Daily Colonist was a "set up." He said the photographer emptied a wastebasket on the floor, and had volunteer parent Malcolm Anderson pose sweeping it up.

But today, the photographer, Ian McKain, said "I didn't touch a thing out there. I didn't empty a wastebasket."

Cunningham said teachers at Frank Hobbs elementary school, where Anderson and some other parents have done some cleaning, were "outraged" that this school should be singled out and were considering signing a petition of protest.

In another matter, Cunningham said the school board was wrong in newspaper advertisements this week which said the district proposed no change in the rated floor area to be cleaned by janitors.

In fact, said Cunningham, the district proposed in negotiations that the clause in contract referring to rated floor area be deleted.

'Manipulation' Deplored

"I don't know if they were lying to us, but I have an idea they were lying to the general public," he said.

School district personnel officer Dave Coton was unavailable for comment this morning, but on a radio open-line show Wednesday he admitted that district negotiators proposed deletion of the square footage clause.

The four Greater Victoria mayors, meanwhile, announced their support Wednesday for the school board.

Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen, Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis, Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford and Esquimalt Mayor Art Young said they will ask their councils to take a similar stand.

Their statement supported collective bargaining and adequate wages for government employees but deplored the "manipulation of innocent third parties" and "excessive demands which appear to be the order of the day but are totally unrelated to the cost of living or the ability of the property owners to pay."

The mayors resolved that their councils request that the minister of labor "conduct an inquiry into the dispute with a view to reopening schools immediately and arriving at a settlement which is fair to the employees and equitable to the taxpayers."

The mayors' statement brought a sharp reply from Ray Mercer, assistant western regional director of the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

He said their statement is an "unwarranted intrusion into collective bargaining and into negotiations they are not a party to." He also accused the four mayors of conspiring to impose unrealistically low wage settlements on school district and municipalities on southern Vancouver Island.

He accused Curtis of having the "audacity to suggest CUPE is using Local 382 to set a pattern in the local area. The only ones conspiring to impose an unrealistic wage settlement not only on school board employees but on others throughout the Lower Island, are the mayors, who have met one with the other."

The labor council accused the school board of "arbitrary rule by management" and of "trying to take away previously-won gains" and delegates voted full support for the striking union and urged all union members in Victoria to "show tangible support by joining picket lines."

44-Acre Goal Set For Parkland Plan

A 10-year park-buying program, prepared by Victoria parks administrator Cliff Bate, recommends purchase of 44.39 acres of parkland by 1982.

Bate told the city's parks and recreation committee today that "many, many, many" hours of work had gone into the making of an inventory of the city's 434 acres of parkland and the 10-year parkland acquisition program.

The inventory shows that Victoria has less than the normally accepted ratio of recreational space to people, with 7.1 acres per 1,000 residents against the norm of 10 acres per 1,000.

Bate recommends that Victoria continues to participate in large part acreage purposes through the regional park authority.

Victoria, itself, should increase the minimal size of its neighborhood parks and playgrounds, acquire space for waterfront park development and purchase playlot and playground sites in the areas of Fairfield, Rockland, Fernwood, Beacon Hill, James Bay and Burnside.

Finance Committee Split On Hospital Tax Ruling

A city council finance committee was divided this morning on whether to upset a city council decision last year which enforced taxation on two city lots owned by Victoria General Hospital and used for parking.

Committee chairman Ald. Tom Christie said he couldn't understand why the lots which hold 158 employees' cars on Fairfield had not been exempted from taxation.

"This should be rectrified. We're not taxing Royal Jubilee (hospital). One hospital's getting off the hook."

Hospital acting director John Murray said the hospital had 15,500 admissions in 1972, 25,000 emergency visits, engaged 300 doctors and employed 1,000 staff.

He said the hospital had 248 parking spaces in all, 90 of them next to the buildings, for patient and visitor traffic, 158 of them across the street on the two lots in question.

The hospital wants to get out of paying approximately $700 in annual taxes on the employee parking.

But Ald. Percy Frampton said that $470 made by the hospital each month from employee parking charges was sufficient to pay the taxes.

Ald. Bill Tindall said the entire situation of non-profit bodies and the status of their parking areas should be studied.

The committee agreed to discuss the matter further once Ald. Alf Hood submitted a report on the situation.

Q. Where can I write to inquire about names and locations of schools for training and caring for horses, riding instruction, etc. By this I mean live-in, where you pay a fee. They can be either in the U.S. or Canada. Also, the names and locations of some harness-saddlemakers.—K.B.

The yellow pages list four local harness and saddlery shops.

Q. When were the liquor stores in Victoria open until 1 a.m., and all night? J.O.C.

A. The Liquor Control Board has no records on this, but as far as anyone can remember liquor stores were never open until 1 a.m. or all night in Victoria. Vancouver had all-night liquor stores before the Second World War, but not since.

Pickets Hold Back

Office Staffs Want Some Pay

Striking maintenance workers held off picketing Greater Victoria School District offices today to let clerical workers in a sister local go to work.

"They want to earn some money," Canadian Union of Public Employees staff representative Alex Markides said, explaining the removal of pickets.

"One good way of allowing them to earn some money is to let them go to work once in a while," he said.

Clerical workers in CUPE Local 947 have agreed to respect the picket lines of striking Local 382, whose 268 members went on strike Friday afternoon.

In return, the strikers have agreed to let the clerical workers go to work from time to time.

Wednesday, when a picket line was formed at the school board offices about 10:45 a.m., clerical workers were already inside the building. When the pickets appeared the workers, on instruction from their union leaders, went home for the rest of the day.

Markides said today those pickets were an "unfortunate mistake", and said the incident won't be repeated.

Despite the strike, school arrangements have now been made for almost all the 30,878 students in the district to attend school for certain periods of time, at least to get work assignments.

Nine junior secondary schools, closed for students since Monday, opened for the first time at 9 a.m. today.

Principals in each junior high have set up their own schedules for attendance, depending n part on whether the school has any heat or not.

Most will be open for an hour or two each morning, or three times a week, so students can pick up assignments. Central Junior Secondary School, however, plans to open every day from 9 a.m. to noon and 1 to 3 p.m.

Four junior highs — Highrock, Oak Bay, Central and Shoreline — reported exceptionally high attendance this morning.

Two, Colquitz and S. J. Willis, reported below-normal attendance. Colquitz had about 80 per cent attendance, compared with a normal 93 per cent of its 990 students, principal J. M. Drummond said.

S. J. Willis principal H. R. Dawson said 140 of 850 students were absent today, or attendance of 84 per cent. Normal attendance at this time of year is 90 per cent, but Dawson called the attendance "quite good considering the fact that attendance is never perfect".

Arrangements were made this morning for 500 Grade 10 students who normally attend Victoria Senior Secondary School, Esquimalt Senior Secondary, Mount Douglas Senior Secondary and Mount View Senior Secondary.

These Grade 10s will be able to get books at their own schools between 8:30 and 9:30 a.m. Friday and Monday, school board director of instruction Dr. John Wiens said today.

Provincial examinations which start next Tuesday for many students in Grade 11 and 12 will be held at Victoria Senior Secondary, Wiens said. Students will receive instructions about what rooms and times they will have at the school.

All senior secondary students not required to write exams will be dismissed from school next week from Monday through Friday.

NEW CHAIRMAN of the Capital Regional District board is Jim Campbell, director from the Outer Gulf Islands. He defeated Esquimalt Mayor Art Young at Wednesday's inaugural meeting to succeed Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis, who did not seek re-election. Young was later elected chairman of the regional hospital board. Campbell has been one of the most outspoken critics of the board, especially about planning matters, since his election as director a year ago. A former president of the B.C. School Trustees Association, he is a sheep farmer on Saturna Island.

NEVER ON SUNDAY!

There will be a six-hour free rock 'n roll concert at Beacon Hill Park this summer, but it won't be on a Sunday.

Promoter Dave Ringland told Victoria's parks and recreation committee: "We do not intend on using massive amplication systems."

"I intend on conducting the concert with restrained volume for the benefit of those living near the park," Ringland wrote in seeking permission to hold the show on Sunday, Aug. 12 at the Beacon Hill band shell.

But Ald. Tom Christie wasn't impressed. He told fellow committee members today the show should take place at Mount Douglas park, and not on a Sunday.

Committee chairman Ald. Ove Witt told Christie: "You don't have to go to the park on this particular Sunday if you don't want to."

"But six hours of it," groaned Christie.

"So what, you can sit and play bridge for six hours and that would drive me wacky," commented parks administrator Cliff Bate.

The committee agreed to ask Ringland to submit another date for consideration.

Love and Kisses for Wallace in Oak Bay

By BRIAN BUTTERS
Times Staff

They called it the first annual general meeting of the Oak Bay Progressive Conservative Association.

They might as well have called it the first annual Oak Bay love-in.

That is the only proper name to attach to the proceedings Wednesday night at the Windsor Park pavilion. One hundred and sixty of Scott Wallace's best friends showed up.

(See also Pages 3 and 6.)

In fact, it was the first-ever general meeting of the constituency association to be held in Oak Bay following the 1972 province-wide revival of the party through the efforts of provincial leader Derril Warren.

And it can be accurately said that one of the primary reasons for that many people showing up at the meeting was the recent publicity given to an alleged "rift" in the ranks of the party, with MLA Wallace cast in the role of wedge.

The meeting went out of its way — not once, but twice — to establish that it was solidly behind their man Scott as MLA. The first occasion was a standing ovation for his efforts as MLA. The second was a motion passed unanimously that the meeting was going on record as being in favor of "Conservative unanimity."

Nowhere was there a sign of the supposed split in the ranks. There were no tomatoes thrown, no Bronx cheers, not a single heckler. The biggest single problem was the fact that about 40 people had to stand up for two hours because there weren't enough chairs.

It was an appreciative audience which sat — or stood — through the evening of speeches, hat-passing and elections.

There was Warren to hear first. The provincial leader spoke of the gains the party had made in the last year, of his intention to try again to win a seat in the legislature — heavy applause — and of the Tory plans in the upcoming session of the house.

They heard Wallace warn of the dangers of state socialism and the advantages of the profit factor in provincial economics. They heard Hugh Curtis, Tory MLA for Saanich-and-the-Islands, say what a great guy Scott is and how hard he has worked for the party. And they heard themselves applauding every speech and every resolution.

There was business to take care of as well. Money does not grow on trees, Wallace told them; with $161.30 in the bank, they will never be stuck with the label of richest constituency association in the province.

There were officers to be elected for the coming year. And they were elected: president—Fraser McColl; first vice-president—Oak Bay Ald. Norman Pimlott; second vice-president—Elizabeth McKay; secretary—Leah Brown; treasurer—Iris Read; directors—Len Dawes, Barbara Horne, Ann Patterson, Graham Thomson and John McVie.

There was an outgoing president, Mark Preston, to thank for his efforts. He was thanked, even given a standing ovation. It was that kind of night.

The feeling one got was that each one of the 160 present wanted to tell Greater Victoria: "We Tories are still together, no matter what you read in the newspapers."

Greater Victoria, consider yourself told!

Throne Speech Passes

Times News Services

OTTAWA (CP) — The minority Liberal government came through its third confidence test in less than a week Wednesday as the Commons approved a motion to accept the speech from the throne.

The motion, concluding an eight-day debate on the throne speech, read when Parliament opened Jan. 4, was opposed only by Conservatives.

Standings in the 264-seat House are Liberal 109, Conservative 107, NDP 31, Social Credit 15 and Independent two.

The vote was taken in a half-filled Commons with only one party leader present — Opposition Leader Stanfield. Prime Minister Trudeau was absent because of the death of his mother Tuesday in Montreal and both NDP Leader David Lewis and Social Credit Leader Real Caouette were occupied by outside meetings.

The House begins work today on supplementary spending estimates which the government must have passed to carry on federal business.

This shifts the government into another grey area where NDP support is not guaranteed except on straightforward confidence motions.

The major item of Commons business Wednesday was introduction of a bill by Manpower Minister Robert Andras that would cut off employment insurance benefits to people who quit jobs "without just cause" or who are fired for misconduct.

It would also deny benefits to unemployed persons who refuse other work "without good cause."

Andras said the legislation, if approved by the House, will save the country more than $100 million annually and end the major source of unemployment insurance abuse.

TAXING TEST for citizens is the income tax form, 11 feet long when glued edge-to-edge as it was held by Conservative MP Sinclair Stevens while he talked to reporters Wednesday. Stevens and Tory House Leader Gerald Baldwin criticized the new federal form as too long, too complicated and made of too heavy paper, making it "impossible" to make carbon copies.

Ottawa to Close POs If Strikes Continue

Times News Services

Striking postal workers blocked mail in Toronto for a second day today and a government source said Ottawa planned to shut down all post offices in the affected areas if the walkouts continued.

This would result in the total interruption of postal services if the walkouts, which occurred in Toronto, Vancouver and Belleville earlier this week, spread to other localities.

A post office spokesman said virtually no mail was being delivered in Toronto, heart of two million people, and the only intra-Metro movement was between Scarborough borough in the east and a portion of the western outskirts.

Information officer Ed Roworth, the spokesman said that to avoid adding to a pile of more than one million items here, Toronto-bound mail from elsewhere in Canada was being held at post offices en route.

Even if the strike had ended, it would have taken all day to clear up the backlog of one million pieces of mail from Wednesday's walkout.

Because of this, letter carriers had been told by the post office not to report for work until the backlog had been cleared. Bob McGarry, president of District Five of the Letter Carriers Union called the order a lockout and said the post office was "irresponsible."

Postal workers at Vancouver, however, returned to work Wednesday night after a 24-hour walkout to protest the lack of progress in negotiations.

Ottawa officials said the government is not prepared to put up with the disastrous rotating strikes which took place in 1970. The mails were thoroughly disrupted over a three-month period, yet the average postal worker lost only five days pay through the hit-and-run tactics.

This time, the government has vowed that if one office is struck by the union members, all offices depending on the first one will be shut down. And all workers will suffer financially.

The government is hoping that the public will blame the postal employees for the mail services interruption, because the employees walked out first, following the breakdown in contract negotiations Tuesday.

$50,000 FOR STRAYS

It costs Victoria nearly $50,000 annually to keep stray cats and dogs off the streets, Ald. Ove Witt told city council finance committee today.

"That's a fantastic amount of money to spend on animals that are going to be buried three feet under anyway," he commented in a discussion on giving the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals a $23,000 per year two-year contract with the city.

Witt said it cost $48,628 to catch, keep and kill cats and dogs — $24,868 went on cats; $12,368 went on dogs.

"For example, 2,300 cats were brought in," Witt said. "Five hundred of them were adopted. Seventeen hundred were kept for up to three days at about $3 per day. Then it cost $5,265 to do away with them."

It was noted that the cost of dealing with unwanted pets was costing more than half the SPCA's total budget of $83,000.

The society provides two full-time pound men, keeps an office and has staffed, heated, medically-inspected kennels. It also operates a 24-hour emergency service.

Ceasefire Talks To Resume

Times News Services

A joint announcement from Hanoi and the Florida White House today said the secret Vietnam peace talks in Paris will resume Tuesday "for the purpose of completing the text of an agreement."

In Saigon, government sources said a ceasefire pact will be signed within two weeks as heavy fighting flared near the capital with both sides apparently jockeying to improve their positions in anticipation of the ceasefire.

Emphasizing that he was reading language approved by both, the United States and North Vietnam, White House press secretary Ronald Ziegler said:

"Dr. Henry Kissinger will resume private negotiations with special adviser Le Duc Tho and minister Xuan Thuy on Jan. 23, 1973, for the purpose of completing the text of an agreement."

Ziegler indicated Kissinger, President Nixon's special envoy, would leave Washington Monday for Paris and said he could not predict how long the envoy might remain there.

Asked whether this would be the final meeting of Kissinger and the North Vietnamese, Ziegler said: "The announcement will have to speak for itself."

Ziegler said the United States would have no comment on the negotiations "until a final agreement is reached."

Asked whether a ceasefire might take effect in Indochina prior to completion of the promised peace agreement, Ziegler said "there has been an awful lot of speculation along that line," but added he was not prepared to "address that speculation."

Ziegler also announced that U.S. Army Gen. Alexander M. Haig Jr. now in Bangkok, Thailand, as part of a Southeast Asia tour to discuss the Paris talks, would return to Saigon Saturday and meet again with South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu. He said he did not know whether Haig would return to Washington prior to Kissinger's departure.

Escalation of battlefield fighting sparked the heaviest raids by U.S. warplanes over the south in more than two months, military spokesmen claimed today.

South Vietnamese troops encountered stiff resistance for the second consecutive day today in the Michelin Rubber Plantation, 40 miles northwest of Saigon, where a major

Impasse Over?

Labor Minister Bill King said today there is a possible basis for settlement of the 27½-month strike at Sandringham Private Hospital.

He made the comment after a 90-minute meeting with officials of the hospital and the striking Canadian Union of Public Employees.

He expected to be in contact with both sides within a week. He admitted there is a stumbling block to settlement, but wouldn't identify it.

"I don't want to say anything or to start identifying any responsibility for the impasse which would contribute nothing to a settlement," he said.

Lawyer Neil Cook, who accompanied hospital co-owner Russell Shepherd, said "we have reached agreement as to a method of establishing whether we can resolve the issue." He said he would be in touch with employees working at the hospital between now and Saturday.

'Canada First' Policy On Oil Exports Unchanged

OTTAWA (CP) — The worsening U.S. heating oil shortage has opened the door for what amounts to full-capacity exports of Western Canada supplies.

But the Canadian policy remains unchanged and remains aloof from a so-called continental policy, federal spokesmen said today.

They said Deputy Minister Jack Austin of the federal energy department was misinterpreted Wednesday in being quoted as saying that some progress has been made on sharing oil supplies in an emergency.

The spokesmen said that applies solely to the talks that have been proceeding privately and quietly for two years or more on another kind of emergency — how Eastern Canada would get its imported oil in the event of any situation threatening supplies now coming from Venezuela, the Middle East and elsewhere.

It has been the U.S. fear that if Eastern Canada oil reserves were cut off, its imports from Western Canada also would dry up as the Canadian tap was turned to Eastern Canada.

The current situation is another kind of emergency that has no bearing on existing discussions, they said.

President Nixon Wednesday announced what amounts to temporary full-capacity access for Western Canada oil east of the Rockies, with more oil also bound for the West Coast, which has not been subject to the formal quota system.

But the official Canadian position on oil-sharing remains as spelled out last week by Energy Minister Donald Macdonald, a spokesman said.

The minister told the Commons last week that an oil-sharing agreement — or continental approach — would apply only if all North America is cut off from its foreign suppliers.

PLANNED MURDER UP DURING HANGING BAN

CALGARY (CP) — The Herald says unpublished figures prepared by the federal government show the number of murders involving premeditation or committed in the course of other crimes increased sharply during the ban on capital punishment.

Statistics released on murders have only given the bare totals, the paper said, but the judicial section of Statistics Canada has broken these down according to motive, as determined by police.

Murder for revenge during the first three years of the capital punishment ban, 1968-70, increased to 76 from 57 in the three years before the ban.

During the same time, murders in the course of robbery and theft almost doubled to 119 from 61 and those committed during sexual assault rose to 44 from 28.

Murders in the course of other criminal acts rose to 61 from 11, but the paper said this category is misleading because 40 of those deaths were attributed to an arson fire in Quebec.

INCHES FROM DEATH, but the driver of the little station wagon was not seriously injured when the large truck overturned onto his car at a Vancouver intersection. Rush-hour traffic was tied up for several hours as wreckers struggled to right the overturned truck.

Only the Insane Know Who's Sane?

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Who's sane? Who's insane?

The psychiatrists and staffs of mental hospitals cannot be trusted to tell the difference, says Prof. David L. Rosenhan, a Stanford University psychologist.

Rosenhan says he and seven other sane investigators arranged as a test to be admitted as schizophrenic patients in 12 different mental hospitals, yet none of the eight was found to be sane by hospital professionals.

But Rosenhan says it was "quite common" for actual psychiatric patients to identify correctly the "pseudo-patient" imposters.

Rosenhan said he and his seven colleagues eventually were released as "schizophrenics in remission," despite their best efforts to convince the hospital staff of their sanity.

"We now know that we cannot distinguish insanity from sanity," Rosenhan said.

"We continue to label patients 'schizophrenic,' 'manic-depressive,' and 'insane' as if in those words we had captured the essence of understanding," he wrote.

"The facts of the matter are that we have known for a long time that our diagnoses often are not useful or reliable, but we have nevertheless continued to use them."

Rosenhan seid he and the other pseudo-patients were shocked and horrified by their experiences.

But, he said, they did not blame the hospital staffs.

"By and large, they were well-intentioned people, and in no way do we want to malign them," he said.

Rosenhan said the pseudo-patient group included a psychiatrist, a pediatrician, a painter, a housewife, a Stanford psychology graduate student and three other psychologists.

He said they gained admission to hospitals in California, Oregon, Pennsylvania, New York and Delaware by feigning symptoms of schizophrenia.

"The uniform failure to recognize sanity cannot be attributed to the quality of treatment facilities," Rosenhan said. "While there was considerable variability between them, several are considered excellent.

"Nor can it be alleged that there simply was not enough time to observe the pseudo-patients. Length of hospitalization ranged from seven to 52 days, with an average of 19 days."

CORONA GUILTY IN DEATHS

FAIRFIELD, Calif. (AP) — A jury found Juan Corona guilty today of the biggest mass murder in United States history, the slaying of 25 transient laborers whose bodies were found in shallow graves near Yuba City in 1971.

The jury of 10 men and two women found Corona guilty after more than 46 hours of deliberations which stretched over eight days.

Throne Speech Passes

Times News Services

OTTAWA (CP) — The minority Liberal government came through its third confidence test in less than a week Wednesday as the Commons approved a motion to accept the speech from the throne.

The motion, concluding an eight-day debate on the throne speech, read when Parliament opened Jan. 4, was opposed only by Conservatives.

Standings in the 264-seat House are Liberal 109, Conservative 107, NDP 31, Social Credit 15 and Independent two.

The vote was taken in a half-filled Commons with only one party leader present — Opposition Leader Stanfield. Prime Minister Trudeau was absent because of the death of his mother Tuesday in Montreal and both NDP Leader David Lewis and Social Credit Leader Real Caouette were occupied by outside meetings.

The House begins work today on supplementary spending estimates which the government must have passed to carry on federal business.

This shifts the government into another grey area where NDP support is not guaranteed except on straightforward confidence motions.

The major item of Commons business Wednesday was introduction of a bill by Manpower Minister Robert Andras that would cut off employment insurance benefits to people who quit jobs "without just cause" or who are fired for misconduct.

It would also deny benefits to unemployed persons who refuse other work "without good cause."

Andras said the legislation, if approved by the House, will save the country more than $100 million annually and end the major source of unemployment insurance abuse.

TAXING TEST for citizens is the income tax form, 11 feet long when glued edge-to-edge as it was held by Conservative MP Sinclair Stevens while he talked to reporters Wednesday. Stevens and Tory House Leader Gerald Baldwin criticized the new federal form as too long, too complicated and made of too heavy paper, making it "impossible" to make carbon copies.

Ottawa to Close POs If Strikes Continue

Times News Services

Striking postal workers blocked mail in Toronto for a second day today and a government source said Ottawa planned to shut down all post offices in the affected areas if the walkouts continued.

This would result in the total interruption of postal services if the walkouts, which occurred in Toronto, Vancouver and Belleville earlier this week, spread to other localities.

A post office spokesman said virtually no mail was being delivered in Toronto, heart of two million people, and the only intra-Metro movement was between Scarborough borough in the east and a portion of the western outskirts.

Information officer Ed Roworth, the spokesman said that to avoid adding to a pile of more than one million items here, Toronto-bound mail from elsewhere in Canada was being held at post offices en route.

Even if the strike had ended, it would have taken all day to clear up the backlog of one million pieces of mail from Wednesday's walkout.

Because of this, letter carriers had been told by the post office not to report for work until the backlog had been cleared. Bob McGarry, president of District Five of the Letter Carriers Union called the order a lockout and said the post office was "irresponsible."

Postal workers at Vancouver, however, returned to work Wednesday night after a 24-hour walkout to protest the lack of progress in negotiations.

Ottawa officials said the government is not prepared to put up with the disastrous rotating strikes which took place in 1970. The mails were thoroughly disrupted over a three-month period, yet the average postal worker lost only five days pay through the hit-and-run tactics.

This time, the government has vowed that if one office is struck by the union members, all offices depending on the first one will be shut down. And all workers will suffer financially.

The government is hoping that the public will blame the postal employees for the mail services interruption, because the employees walked out first, following the breakdown in contract negotiations Tuesday.

DOCKERS TO VOTE

VANCOUVER (CP) — A caucus of 60 International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union officials Wednesday voted a strong recommendation for acceptance by B.C. dockworkers of a proposed settlement to end a contract dispute dating back to last summer.

About 3,200 members of the union on the B.C. coast now are to vote this weekend on the settlement with the B.C. Maritime Employers Association.

NEWS BRIEFS

Drought in India

NEW DELHI (AP) — India has been hit by its worst drought in a decade and has contracted to import about two million tons of food grains — from Canada, the United States and Argentina, Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's government said Wednesday.

Leary Returns

LONDON (AP) — Dr. Timothy Leary, former Harvard University lecturer and drug advocate, flew to Los Angeles today with a two-man escort from the United States narcotics bureau. Leary escaped in September, 1970, from prison in San Luis Obispo County, Calif., where he was serving a one-to-10-year sentence on a drug conviction. He was expelled from Afghanistan Wednesday.

CLC Union Unhappy

VANCOUVER (CP) — Employees of the Canadian Labor Congress have voted 87 per cent in favor of strike action. The 32 employees across Canada, members of the CLC Representatives Union, have been without a contract since June. A major item in the dispute has been pay for staff representatives.

$50,000 FOR STRAYS

It costs Victoria nearly $50,000 annually to keep stray cats and dogs off the streets, Ald. Ove Witt told city council finance committee today.

"That's a fantastic amount of money to spend on animals that are going to be buried three feet under anyway," he commented in a discussion on giving the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals a $23,000 per year two-year contract with the city.

Witt said it cost $48,628 to catch, keep and kill cats and dogs — $24,868 went on cats; $12,368 went on dogs.

"For example, 2,300 cats were brought in," Witt said. "Five hundred of them were adopted. Seventeen hundred were kept for up to three days at about $3 per day. Then it cost $5,265 to do away with them."

It was noted that the cost of dealing with unwanted pets was costing more than half the SPCA's total budget of $83,000.

The society provides two full-time pound men, keeps an office and has staffed, heated, medically-inspected kennels. It also operates a 24-hour emergency service.

Ceasefire Talks To Resume

Times News Services

A joint announcement from Hanoi and the Florida White House today said the secret Vietnam peace talks in Paris will resume Tuesday "for the purpose of completing the text of an agreement."

In Saigon, government sources said a ceasefire pact will be signed within two weeks as heavy fighting flared near the capital with both sides apparently jockeying to improve their positions in anticipation of the ceasefire.

Emphasizing that he was reading language approved by both the United States and North Vietnam, White House press secretary, Ronald Ziegler said:

"Dr. Henry Kissinger will resume private negotiations with special adviser Le Duc Tho and minister Xuan Thuy on Jan. 23, 1973, for the purpose of completing the text of an agreement."

Ziegler indicated Kissinger, President Nixon's special envoy, would leave Washington Monday for Paris and said he could not predict how long the envoy might remain there.

Asked whether this would be the final meeting of Kissinger and the North Vietnamese, Ziegler said: "The announcement will have to speak for itself."

Ziegler said the United States would have no comment on the negotiations "until a final agreement is reached."

Asked whether a ceasefire might take effect in Indochina prior to completion of the promised peace agreement, Ziegler said "there has been an awful lot of speculation along that line," but added he was not prepared to "address that speculation."

Ziegler also announced that U.S. Army Gen. Alexander M. Haig Jr. now in Bangkok, Thailand, as part of a Southeast Asia tour to discuss the Paris talks, would return to Saigon Saturday and meet again with South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu. He said he did not know whether Haig would return to Washington prior to Kissinger's departure.

Escalation of battlefield fighting sparked the heaviest raids by U.S. warplanes over the south in more than two months, military spokesmen claimed today.

South Vietnamese troops encountered stiff resistance for the second consecutive day today in the Michelin Rubber Plantation, 40 miles northwest of Saigon, where a major

Impasse Over?

Labor Minister Bill King said today there is a possible basis for settlement of the 27½-month strike at Sandringham Private Hospital.

He made the comment after a 90-minute meeting with officials of the hospital and the striking Canadian Union of Public Employees.

He expected to be in contact with both sides within a week. He admitted there is a stumbling block to settlement, but wouldn't identify it.

"I don't want to say anything or to start identifying any responsibility for the impasse which would contribute nothing to a settlement," he said.

Lawyer Neil Cook, who accompanied hospital co-owner Russell Shepherd, said "we have reached agreement as to a method of establishing whether we can resolve the issue." He said he would be in touch with employees working at the hospital between now and Saturday.

'Canada First' Policy On Oil Exports Unchanged

OTTAWA (CP) — The worsening U.S. heating oil shortage has opened the door for what amounts to full-capacity exports of Western Canada supplies.

But the Canadian policy remains unchanged and remains aloof from a so-called continental policy, federal spokesmen said today.

They said Deputy Minister Jack Austin of the federal energy department was misinterpreted Wednesday in being quoted as saying that some progress has been made on sharing oil supplies in an emergency.

The spokesmen said that applies solely to the talks that have been proceeding privately and quietly for two years or more on another kind of emergency — how Eastern Canada would get its imported oil in the event of any situation threatening supplies now coming from Venezuela, the Middle East and elsewhere.

It has been the U.S. fear that if Eastern Canada oil reserves were cut off, its imports from Western Canada also would dry up as the Canadian tap was turned to Eastern Canada.

The current situation is another kind of emergency that has no bearing on existing discussions, they said.

President Nixon Wednesday announced what amounts to temporary full-capacity access for Western Canada oil east of the Rockies, with more oil also bound for the West Coast, which has not been subject to the formal quota system.

But the official Canadian position on oil-sharing remains as spelled out last week by Energy Minister Donald Macdonald, a spokesman said.

The minister told the Commons last week that an oil-sharing agreement — or continental approach — would apply only if all North America is cut off from its foreign suppliers.

PLANNED MURDER UP DURING HANGING BAN

CALGARY (CP) — The Herald says unpublished figures prepared by the federal government show the number of murders involving premeditation or committed in the course of other crimes increased sharply during the ban on capital punishment.

Statistics released on murders have only given the bare totals, the paper said, but the judicial section of Statistics Canada has broken these down according to motive, as determined by police.

Murder for revenge during the first three years of the capital punishment ban, 1968-70, increased to 76 from 57 in the three years before the ban.

During the same time, murders in the course of robbery and theft almost doubled to 119 from 61 and those committed during sexual assault rose to 44 from 28.

Murders in the course of other criminal acts rose to 61 from 11, but the paper said this category is misleading because 40 of those deaths were attributed to an arson fire in Quebec.

INCHES FROM DEATH, but the driver of the little station wagon was not seriously injured when the large truck overturned onto his car at a Vancouver intersection. Rush-hour traffic was tied up for several hours as wreckers struggled to right the overturned truck.

Only the Insane Know Who's Sane?

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) Who's sane? Who's insane?

The psychiatrists and staffs of mental hospitals cannot be trusted to tell the difference, says Prof. David L. Rosenhan, a Stanford University psychologist.

Rosenhan says he and seven other sane investigators arranged as a test to be admitted as schizophrenic patients in 12 different mental hospitals, yet none of the eight was found to be sane by hospital professionals.

But Rosenhan says it was "quite common" for actual psychiatric patients to identify correctly the "pseudo-patient" imposters.

Rosenhan said he and his seven colleagues eventually were released as "schizophrenics in remission," despite their best efforts to convince the hospital staff of their sanity.

"We now know that we cannot distinguish insanity from sanity," Rosenhan said.

"We continue to label patients 'schizophrenic,' 'manic-depressive,' and 'insane' as if in those words we had captured the essence of understanding," he wrote.

"The facts of the matter are that we have known for a long time that our diagnoses often are not useful or reliable, but we have nevertheless continued to use them."

Rosenhan seid he and the other pseudo-patients were shocked and horrified by their experiences.

But, he said, they did not blame the hospital staffs.

"By and large, they were well-intentioned people, and in no way do we want to malign them," he said.

Rosenhan said the pseudo-patient group included a psychiatrist, a pediatrician, a painter, a housewife, a Stanford psychology graduate student and three other psychologists.

He said they gained admission to hospitals in California, Oregon, Pennsylvania, New York and Delaware by feigning symptoms of schizophrenia.

"The uniform failure to recognize sanity cannot be attributed to the quality of treatment facilities," Rosenhan said. "While there was considerable variability between them, several are considered excellent.

"Nor can it be alleged that there simply was not enough time to observe the pseudo-patients. Length of hospitalization ranged from seven to 52 days, with an average of 19 days."

CORONA GUILTY IN DEATHS

FAIRFIELD, Calif. (AP) A jury found Juan Corona guilty today of the biggest mass murder in United States history, the slaying of 25 transient laborers whose bodies were found in shallow graves near Yuba City in 1971.

The jury of 10 men and two women found Corona guilty after more than 46 hours of deliberations which stretched over eight days.

Wild Dog Packs Threaten Ontario Villagers

MOOSONEE, Ont. (CP) — More and more people in this James Bay community are carrying sticks when they walk the streets.

Fresh in their minds is the case of Jane Marks who was attacked by a pack of dogs Dec. 23 and still is in hospital recovering from more than 200 stitches needed to close wounds in her arms, legs and face.

But the danger that lurks here is real.

Mrs. Marks was hauled down by a pack of dogs which police say have no real owners. They run loose leftovers from the days when people used dogs to haul supplies.

The day of the dogsled has practically vanished. The snowmobile now is the vehicle of winter transportation.

"Mrs. Marks is quite well now," said Dr. N. L. Fraser. "We don't get this type of thing often but one is enough to scare anybody."

The five-man provincial police detachment here is forced to shoot stray dogs with shotguns.

"Hell, we're just like anyone else," said a police spokesman. "We don't like shooting dogs but we have to for the public's sake."

A salesman from Kirkland Lake said he drove past the community's dump and saw a pack of about eight.

"There was just no way I was going to get out of that car," he said. "They looked bad."

Many of the bitches in this community and up the western James Bay coast have their litters in the bush and the young are half wild.

Five-Car Collision

An estimated $2,700 damage resulted from a five-car collision on an "icy" section of the Pat Bay Highway Wednesday, Central Saanich police said today.

All five drivers were unhurt, police said.

Cars driven by John Howard Nyru, 2467 Mt. St. Michael's, and John Harrison, 10082 Tsaykum, skidded near the intersection at Mt. Newton Cross Road and collided. Both cars remained on the road.

Mrs. Bernard Walsh, 4131 Borden, saw the first two cars and skidded onto a soft shoulder to avoid them. Her car was undamaged, police said.

Emilio Navarro, 10148 Resthaven, also tried to avoid the first two cars and slid into a ditch.

A car driven by Mrs. Diane McBratney, 1340 Munro, spun on the ice and crashed into the concrete median, said police.

Rape Trial Verdict: Guilty, Jury Suggests Leniency

After five hours of deliberation the jury returned its verdict with a recommendation for leniency.

He was charged by Colwood RCMP following an incident in the Highlands district Nov. 17 involving a 23-year-old Saanich woman.

The complainant, a registered nurse, testified during the three-day trial that Makow and a female passenger had picked her up on Douglas Street Nov. 16 while hitch-hiking home.

She told the jury of three women and nine men that the accused dropped off the other woman and drove to the wooded area where she was forced to comply with his demands.

Makow told the court he made no threats nor exercised any force. He said the woman had taken "quite an active part" in the intercourse.

In his address to the jury, defence counsel Harold Turnham said, "There is no question that intercourse took place."

The question was whether or not there was voluntary consent, said Turnham.

He told the jury that Makow did not strike the woman and had no weapons on his person.

"And yet she says she was in fear of bodily harm . . . She didn't put up any struggle at all," said Turnham.

In his summation, Prosecutor Alan Bigelow said the jury must assess the credibility of each witness and decide whose testimony to believe — that of the accused or that of the complainant.

Turnham had pointed out that the woman hitch-hiked regularly.

"There's no open season on hitch-hikers," said Bigelow. "This girl isn't on trial for hitch-hiking — this man's on trial for rape."

Turnham also mentioned the woman had admitted to being a casual user of marijuana.

"That doesn't allow this man to come along and rape her just because she's taken pot," said Bigelow.

In his charge to the jury, McIntyre said the issue was on the nature of the consent — was it voluntary or forced?

Testimony concerning the character of the witnesses was given "so that you can form some idea of who you're going to believe," said McIntyre.

"No matter what her character, if she did not consent, it's rape," he said.

The jury retired about 2 p.m. and returned shortly after 7 p.m. They returned to the courtroom once to ask for further legal instructions from McIntyre and to have some of the evidence read back by a court reporter.

LIP Grant Approved For Parks

A wide variety of improvements in the city's parks will be made under a Local Initiatives Program approved for Victoria Wednesday.

The $61,500 federal grant will put 14 people to work for six months, city council's parks committee was told today.

The money will be spent on cleaning up Smith's Hill, a new park at the Saanich boundary near Cook; replacing playground fences, fixing boulevards, reconditioning flower beds and other projects.

Part of the grant will go to pay for improvements to the Hollywood Park drainage system.

Manslaughter Charge

Ernest Lavern Hotvedt, charged with non-capital murder Nov. 5, will face a lesser charge of manslaughter Friday, Crown Prosecutor Alan Bigelow said today.

Represented by lawyer Dermod Owen-Flood, he appeared before Mr. Justice Douglas Andrews in B.C. Supreme Court here Jan. 8.

After four days of testimony given by 25 witnesses, the all-male jury retired at 3:50 p.m. Jan. 11. It returned twice for further legal instruction from the judge and at 2:45 a.m. advised the court it was unable to reach a verdict.

In Canadian law, anyone convicted of manslaughter is liable to imprisonment for life." The "minimum punishment" for non-capital murder is life imprisonment.

. . . CEASEFIRE TALKS

communist buildup of 8,000 men with armor and artillery was reported. The buildup poses a major threat to the South Vietnamese capital and its outlying areas.

Military sources said 13 government soldiers were killed and 40 wounded in the fighting there Wednesday, and the battle continued today when a large communist force attacked a 1,000-man South Vietnamese field position.

U.S. warplanes, no longer in action over North Vietnam, struck heavily in the area around Saigon and also in northernmost Quang Tri province where fighting also continued in the government campaign to push North Vietnamese forces back into the demilitarized zone (DMZ) between the two Vietnams.

The Saigon sources said Thieu and his National Security Council agreed Wednesday night to the terms of the ceasefire worked out between Kissinger and Le Duc Tho.

South Vietnam believes it could have obtained more concessions in the peace agreement but was willing to sign believing it had obtained sufficient concessions to guarantee the future of the country, the sources said.

In Bangkok, U.S. Ambassador Leonard Unger told the American Chamber of Commerce that U.S. military strength in Thailand will be scaled down when the Vietnam war ends, but sufficient strength will be maintained to prevent violations of the peace agreement. There now are 49,000 U.S. troops stationed in Thailand, carrying on the air war in Vietnam.

The draft agreement calls for a withdrawal of all U.S. forces from Vietnam within 60 days of signing, but there is no prohibition against U.S. forces in Thailand or against U.S. naval forces in the area.

President Thieu has given his province chiefs wide latitude to make political arrests after the coming ceasefire and has also empowered them to "shoot troublemakers" on the spot, reliable South Vietnamese sources said Wednesday.

Wherever possible, American sources added, those arrested are to be charged with common crimes instead of political ones because, it is acknowledged, the prisoners are easier to deal with that way. The communist demand for release of all political prisoners has been a sticking point in the Paris negotiations and the government's intention, sources said, is to keep the number of prisoners down, at least on paper.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A suspended sentence and two-year probationary term were ordered by Judge William Ostler in provincial court Wednesday for a 19-year-old Victoria man on a charge of attempted breaking and entering.

Earlier, Michael Cousins, of 1955 Ashgrove, had pleaded guilty to unlawfully trying to enter Highland Woodworkers Ltd., 116 Dallas, early on Dec. 28.

In his report, the probation officer noted that Cousins was easily led by his peers.

Prosecutor J. W. Anderson, reminded the judge "he was alone at the time" and that the act was "a most deliberate one."

Asked by Ostler if he had been talked into the incident, Cousins replied:

"Well, I was broke and they offered me a hundred bucks."

Noting that the probation officer had recommended a suspended sentence, Ostler reminded Cousins that this was the second time he had committed an offence and been put on probation.

"This, as far as I am concerned," he said, "is the last time you'll get away with this sort of thing."

have been free to strike legally since Dec. 21, following conciliation proceedings.

Meanwhile, at Belleville, Ont., mail service returned to normal Wednesday night after letter carriers withdrew picket lines set up earlier in the day.

The picket lines were withdrawn on an understanding that an agreement would be reached in the dispute with the federal treasury board within 48 hours, or the strike would resume.

One factor in the Belleville situation is that the Unemployment Insurance Commission's central commuter is located there and officials said 24,000 pieces of mail were delayed.

The computer centre is responsible for UIC payments throughout the province. Officials said the UIC has a private delivery service to take mail to district offices in the event of a postal disruption.

Meanwhile, Postmaster-General Andre Ouellet said in the House of Commons the government is ready to accept all terms of a conciliation board report in its contract dispute with postal workers.

Faced with opposition suggestions that the government was backing away from the report and negotiations had broken down, Ouellet assured the House the government position has not changed and a contract may be signed soon.

the weather

A strong Pacific storm that was off the California coast on Wednesday is expected to track offshore towards the Queen Charlotte Islands. Consequently the only appreciable precipitation expected in B.C. will occur on the coast and in the cold Arctic air covering the extreme northern Interior. Meanwhile another storm winding up far out to sea is expected to affect coastal regions during the latter part of Friday.
